

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

THE present edition of the Hecuba is mainly intended to explain and illustrate the play itself. But it being impossible to treat a Greek play as a separate and isolated whole we have tried to make sure that a boy after carefully and intelligently studying our commentary shall not merely be able to pass a close examination in the Hecuba itself, but shall know more both of Euripides and of Greek scholarship in general.

Our obligations to previous editors are very great: but we have carefully avoided the mistake of writing a mere compilation, which must needs be crude and therefore unsatisfactory. The editors to whom our acknowledgments are more especially due are Porson, Pflugk, Hermann, Dindorf, Kirchhoff, Nauck, Paley, Wecklein and Weil.

Our text is for the most part conservative, following—(as all modern editors must)—the lead of Kirchhoff, whose edition of 1855 placed the text of Euripides on a new footing. With him we have given great weight to the best class of MSS., viz. the Marcian (xii. cent.), the Vatican (xiii.?), and the two Parisian, 2712, 2713; denoted by Prinz A, B, E, a respectively. The 'best MS.' occasionally mentioned in the commentary is the first of these.

All quotations have been given in full, and the only book to which mere references have been made is Prof. Goodwin's excellent School Greek Grammar. We gratefully acknowledge valuable help and advice from the well-known scholars Prof. Kennedy, Mr E. S. Shuckburgh and Mr A. W. Verrall.

INTRODUCTION.

EURIPIDES was born B.C. 480, perhaps on the very day when in 'the * battle' at 'sea-born Salamis' Athens under Themistokles destroyed the great Persian force which Xerxes had brought against Hellas, and won the fight of civilisation and progress over stagnation and barbarism. His lot was therefore cast in the most brilliant epoch of Athenian history, and while he was growing up to manhood the life of the whole of Hellas ran high, all was movement and vigour tempered by Athenian taste into an artistic beauty dignified by power. The literary form which this outburst of energy took was, as in Elizabethan England. the drama. Aeschvlus born B.C. 525 and Sophokles born B.C. 495 had perfected the form of tragedy, the one ruggedly grand, the latter ideally perfect. was reserved for their great successor Euripides to make tragedy not heroic but human, to paint men not as they ought to be but as they are when toiling. rejoicing, sorrowing in the high-ways and the byeways of everyday life. We may everywhere see > *Our Euripides the human With his droppings of warm tears And his touches of things common Till they rose to touch the spheres'.

'His object was to excite interest, not by distant grandeur like Aeschylus, nor by ideals however touching and poetic like Sophokles, but by bringing real men and women on the stage, with real human passions and feelings as his countrymen saw them every day in Athens. The strong side of this realism is clearly 'the touch of nature', the weak side is the danger of its losing all effect and becoming commonplace and undignified'.

The HECUBA tells the story of the Trojan queen's sorrows,—the hateful exchange of slavery for royal estate, the foul murder of her son, the sacrifice of her daughter,—and the bloody revenge wreaked by her upon the slaver of her boy. It abounds with the good and bad points of the poet. It is, as Aristotle said, the 'most tragic' of dramas, and is full of pathetic power. But the set harangues on the possibility of teaching virtue and on the value of rhetoric (traces of the poet's intimate relations with Sokrates, Anaxagoras and other leading spirits of his day,) sound cold and in bad taste, coming as they do from the mouth of a mother steeped in bitter woe. Again, the loose joining of the two parts of which the play is composed indicates a weak point in the poet. The death of Polyxena and the cruel revenge upon Polymestor are really two separate pieces which Euripides has not cared to weld into one very fast whole. For whereas Sophokles contrived that every scene should lead up to the catastrophe, Euripides relied upon the telling nature of particular situations.

It is somewhat strange that, while Euripides gained the first prize but five times in the course of his long dramatic career, so many as 18 of his plays have come down to us as against seven of Sophokles and Aeschylus respectively. His tender pathos and modern spirit will account for his popularity in modern times; for his want of success in his own days, 'why crown whom Zeus has crowned in soul before?'

In criticising such prologues as that spoken by the shade of Polydorus, we must remember that every Athenian in the theatre knew perfectly well already the whole tale of 'the mobled queen.' But he would watch with breathless interest to see how the poet would work out and develop the familiar story, and the prize would be adjudged accordingly. The audience was probably as highly educated as our own Commons: 'for the house is clever', said Aristophanes, one of the cleverest of them all. Macaulay truly says, 'An Athenian citizen might possess very few volumes; and the largest library to which he had access might be much less valuable than Johnson's bookcase in Bolt Court. But the Athenian might pass every morning in conversation with Socrates, and might hear Pericles speak four or five times in a month. He saw the plays of Sophocles and Aristophanes: he walked amidst the friezes of Phidias and the paintings of Zeuxis: he knew by heart the choruses of Aeschylus'.

The date of the Hecuba is fixed with fair precision to B.C. 425 or thereabouts. For Aristophanes in the *Clouds**, which came out B.C. 423, parodies v. 172; compare also the notes on 462, 650. Its moral is the antithesis of barbarism and savagery to Hellenic culture and the reign of law, together with a practical illustration of the favourite Greek saying δράσαντι παθεῖν. The scene is laid in the Thracian Chersonese, over against Troy, where the anger of Achilles has held back the favourable wind from the Greek fleet. His Shade has just appeared above his tomb, demanding as sacrifice the fairest of the Trojan maidens. A Greek council of war votes that Hecuba's daughter Polyxena shall die. Here the action of the play opens.

Structure of the Play.

- PROLOGUE, 1—99 = that part of a tragedy which precedes the first entrance of the chorus.
- II. PARODUS, 100—154 = the song of the chorus as they march into the orchestra and take their place.

III. First Episode, 155-443.

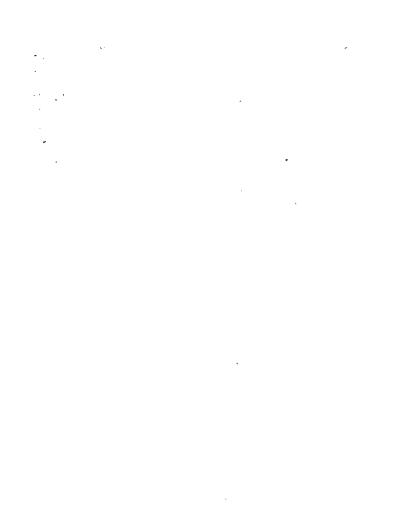

- First Stasmon, 444—483. A Stasimon is a song sung by the chorus from their station.
- V. Second Episode, 484-628.
- VI. Second Stasimon, 629-657.
- VII. Third Episode, 658-904.
- VIII. Third Stasimon, 905-952.
- IX. Exopus, 953—end.

Episodes are the dialogues which come between two choral odes, and it will be seen that they roughly divide the whole play into acts. The Doric poet Alkman gave an artistic form to the choral lyric by arranging that the chorus, while singing stasima, should execute alternately a movement to the right (STROPHE turning) and a movement to the left (ANTISTROPHE); and he composed the songs which the chorus was to sing in couples of stanzas called STROPHE and ANTISTROPHE, answering to these balanced movements. Tisias of Sicily (surnamed Stesichorus, 'marshal of choruses',) perfected the form of the choral lyric by adding to STROPHE and ANTISTROPHE a third part, the

It is advisable to add a few words in explanation of the scholia which are sometimes cited in the commentary. The scholia of Euripides consist of a putting together of two continuous commentaries, the fuller one the work of Dionysius, the other by an anonymous writer, both drawing from Alexander, who again drew largely from Didymus: he for the most part reproduced the opinions of earlier commentators. The genealogy therefore is (1) Didymus, (2) Alexander, (3) (a) Dionysius, (b) Anon., (4) the Scholia themselves.

NOTES.

[1—58. Prologue, contains an outline of the plot. The ghost of Polydorus appears, explains his own miserable murder by his host Polymestor, prince of Thracian Chersonese, the demand of the shade of Achilles for the sacrifice of his sister Polyxena and his own appearance in a dream to his unhappy mother, Hecuba.]

'Εκάβη—appears in Lat. as Hecuba: so κυνδι corresponds to canis, κύλιξ to calix, μυδάω to madeo.

 ήκω—prob. a dialectical variety of ἴκω, in most of its tenses means 'I am here', equiv. to ἐλήλυθα.

σκότου—The masc. form is now always read in Trag. and Comedy; occasionally however a form τὸ σκότος is found even in Attic, e.g. in Xen. and Demosth.

 "Aιδης—(à priv. and √ιδ see), the god of the unseen world, called by euphemism, Ploutôn.

φκισται—'has his home', lit. 'was and is established'. χωρίς θεῶν—cf. Il. 20. 65 οἰκία σμερδαλέ', εὐρώεντα, τά τε στυγέουσι θεοί περ.

3.  $\pi \alpha i s$  yey.  $\tau i s$  K.—(sc.  $\theta v \gamma \alpha \tau \rho \delta s$ ) 'by birth a son of H. daughter of Kisseus'. H. was according to Hom. (Il. 16. 718) daughter of Dymas, a Phrygian, the only daughter of Kisseus known to him being Theano, wife of Antenor (Il. 6. 299).  $K_i \sigma \sigma i a s$ , a local name, was therefore suggested by some ancient critics to reconcile the two accounts. Vergil follows Eur. and Lat. poets generally, except Ovid who calls her Dymantis. Polydorus himself is in Hom. son of Priam and Laothoë and is slain by Achilles.

γεγώς—formed from obsolete poetical γώω collat. form of γίγγομα: so βέβαα.

- 4. Φρυγών πόλιν—The Phrygians were a branch of the great Thracian family, which may account for the familiarity of Priam and Polymestor. In early times they occupied the N.W. coast of Asia and were not, as we see them now in maps, localised inland.
- 5. πεσεῖν—not fut. which would be πεσεῖσθαι, but aor., the peculiar force of which is to regard the fall as momentary not protracted. Perhaps we may consider the phrase as substantival=τοῦ πεσεῖν, 214 n. δορὶ—δόρει would here be inadmissible, which does away with the theory that it is the only allowable form in iambics. 'Ελληνικῷ—strictly an anachronism, for Hom. never calls the united Greeks by the name "Ελληνες, nor indeed any of them except Achilles' followers from Phthiotis, who were the original Hellenes.
- ἐπεξέπεμψε—'sent me secretly (ἐπὸ=sub=furtim of Verg. Aen. 3. 50) away from'. In Androm. 47 a stronger phrase, ἐπεκπέμπω λάθρα, is used. Τρω. χθονός is governed by ἐκ in the verb.
  - $\'\xi\vert\rightarrow\'\rightarrow\
- 8. τήνδε Χερσ. πλάκα—'This steppe of Chersonese'. The Thracian Chers. is a narrow strip of land running along the N. of the Hellespont. τήνδε of Hermann is more graphic than the usual τήν. Χερσ. is the form introduced by Brunck and subsequent editors because the old form χερρ. is nowhere found in tragedy. πλάκα conn. with lanx. Cf. πλύνω, lavo. The general idea is that of breadth and flatness, akin to πλατύς, planus, flat, πλακοῦς, placenta.
- 9. φίλιππον λαόν—'a warrior people'. Π. 13. 4, νόσφω εφ' ἐπποπόλων Θρηκῶν καθορώμενος αΐαν where the schol. explains it as equal to 'warrior'. Thrace was celebrated for horses and cavalry in days of Eur. See Thuc. 2. 98. 'δορί—not 'sceptre', though that was the heroic badge of royalty, but 'spear'. to indicate the warlike character of the Thracians.
- 10. ἐκπέμπα—hist. present, i.e. stands for aorist: hence κη in 12, contrary to the strictly grammatical sequence of tenses.
- 11. 'Illor—so called from its founder Ilus; Troy after his father Tros.
- 12. μη—is better taken with etη than with σπάνις (= 'sufficiency'), though the neg. after the verb is awkward. The same question occurs Or. 942, ως της γε τόλμης οὐ σπάνις γενή-

- 13. We find in Il. 20. 408 that Polydorus is youngest son and forbidden to fight; but contrary to orders he joined in the battle and was slain by Achilles. τὸν δ' οὕτι πατήρ εἴασκε μάχεσθαι | οὕνεκά οἰ μετὰ πᾶσι νεώτατος ἔσκε γόνοιο | καί οἱ φίλτατος ἔσκε.
- 8=δί 8—'wherefore'. Pors. says 'which fact' (τὸ είναι νεώτατον), but ὑπεξέπεμψε would be almost a ridiculous word in this connection.
- 14. δπλα—defensive, as έγχος is offensive, armour. Cf. use of arma in Lat.
- 15. olds τε—'able'. The τε has no very obvious force; it may be classed under the head of τε epexegetic or explanatory.
- 16. δρίσματα—'the flanking walls', by which the circuit of a city is defined, as Paley explains. It would naturally mean the 'boundaries' or 'landmarks', which an enemy would of course remove: Scaliger suggested ἐρείσματα to which ἔκειτο would more naturally apply. The word occurs in Hipp. 1459, δ κλείν' Αθηνῶν Παλλάδο: θ' ὁρίσματα.

Exerto-little more than ny.

- 18. ηὐτύχα—form preferred to εὐτύχει by Porson, though Herodian the grammarian (2nd cent. A.D.) tells us that εὐ does not augment, αὐ does to ηὐ.
- 20. 'I grew up like some sapling, to my sorrow'. This recalls II. 18. 56,  $\delta$  δ'  $d\nu \dot{\epsilon} \delta \rho \alpha \mu \epsilon \nu \dot{\epsilon} \rho \nu \epsilon \dot{\epsilon}$  I for . η  $\dot{\nu} \dot{\epsilon} \delta \dot{\rho} \mu \nu$ —there are alternative forms  $a \delta \dot{\epsilon} \omega$  and  $a \dot{\nu} \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\alpha} \nu \omega$ , Eur. uses  $a \delta \dot{\epsilon} \omega$  in all but three places.  $\tau \dot{\alpha} \lambda a s$   $\sqrt{\tau} \lambda a$ . Cf. latum,  $\ell \tau \lambda \eta \nu$ . Most words from this root have a twofold signification, as  $\tau \lambda \dot{\eta} \mu \omega \nu$ ,  $\tau \lambda \eta \mu \omega \sigma \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu}$ ,  $\tau \lambda \eta \tau \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu}$ , viz. (1) enduring, persistent, sometimes in bad sense, (2) wretched.
- 21, 22. dπόλλυτα...κατεσκάφη—the change of tense (as in 266) may sometimes be accounted for by the wish to make incidents expressed by the present more vivid. But the tragedians often varied the tense for variety's sake. Here the pres. may signify the enduring character of the result.
- 23. αύτός—80. πατήρ (Priam) implied in πατρφία: 80 Soph. Trach. 259, ξρχεται πόλιν | την Εύρντείαν, πόνδε γάρ κ.π.λ. Cio.

- (quoting Pacuvius) de Or. 2. 46, neque paternum adspectum es veritus, quem &c. θεοδμήτφ, 'consecrated', built for the gods, not by them. One of the scholia θειῶς καὶ θανμαστῶς κτισθέντι is tame. The altar referred to in βωμφ is that of Zεὐς Ἐρκεῖος, as we see from Tro. 463, κατασφάγεντ' ἐφ' ἐρκεῖφ πυρὰ and Vergil Aen. 2. 550 speaks of Priam, altaria ad insa trementem.
  - 24. παιδός-Neoptolemus or Pyrrhus.
- 25. κτείνει...κτανών—such repetition is frequent, especially in Eur. Cf. H. Fur. 33, κτείνει Κρέοντα και κτανών άρχει χθονός.
- 27.  $\mu\epsilon\theta\hat{\eta}\chi'$ ,  $\{\nu'...\xi\chi\eta$ —'flung me into the billowy sea in order himself to have the gold in his house'. The subj. anomalously follows an hist, tense to shew that the result still abides. [ $\xi\chi\eta$ , however, may fairly depend on  $\kappa\tau\epsilon\iota\nu\epsilon\iota$  in 25.] According to Verg., Polymestor buried the corpse, but Ov. Met. 13. 438 follows Eur. exanimum e scopulo subjects misti in undas.
- 28. ἐπ' ἀκτῆς. So the best MS.—There is a variant ἀκταῖς, perhaps from 36.  $\sqrt{\text{ag}}$  break, like ρηγμίν from  $\sqrt{\text{PAΓ}}$ , 'place where waves break'. ἀλλοτ'—it is usual though not necessary to understand another ἀλλοτε in preceding clause, as in Soph. El. 752, φορούμενος πρὸς οὖδος, άλλοτ' οὐρανῷ | σκέλη προφαίνων, and Verg. Aen. 5. 830, sinistros | nunc dextros solvere sinus.
- 29. 'Carried about by many revolutions in the waves, (now up now down)'. Not 'ebb and flow of tide', for there was no tide properly speaking in Hellespont, which in view of the ancients was a river, [hence its epithet πλατύς]. δίαυλοι-strictly the limbs of a race-course; the chariots raced up one, turned at the post, καμπτήρ, and then passed down the other limb to the finish. Aesch. Agam. 344 uses the same figure—κάμψαι διαύλου θάτερον κώλον πάλιν, i.e. the Greeks have done only half their journey; the other half, the return, remains to be done. φορούμενος—frequentative form, huc illuc iactatus.
- 30. ἄκλαυστος, ἄταφος—an echo of Il. 22.386, ἄκλαυστος άθαπτος, the words occur Soph. Antig. 29, where, as here, their order is disputed. Cf. Aen. 11.372, inhumata infletaque turba. ὑπὸρ—'because of', 'for the sake of', not=ὑπεράνω, 'above', for if, as is the case, the ghost is visible (see 52), this interpretation would involve his being in two places at once, unless indeed we consider his statement in 31 sqq. a merely general one. There is throughout some confusion between P.'s spirit and his corpse.

- 31.  $dt\sigma\sigma\omega$ —like ruo, is used of any active movement up or down and is both trans. and intrans. In Odys. 10. 495,  $\tau$ 0  $\delta \hat{\epsilon}$  oral  $dt\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma$ , it is appropriately used of the fitting of ghosts. The form in Attic poets is usually a dissyllable which gave rise to the variant  $d\sigma\sigma\sigma$  in this place.
- 32. 'Now for three days' space have I hovered aloft, all such time as my illstarred mother', &c. τριταΐον—the term -aιος = 'of so many days' standing', e.g. τεταρταΐος, S. John xi. 39, 'a corpse of four days'. But cf. Hdt. 4. 113, τῆ δευτεραία, 'on the 2nd day', and in this passage τριταΐον is equivalent to τρίτον, as in Hipp. 277, πῶς δ' οὐ, τριταίαν γ' οὖσ' ἀσιτος ἡμέραν.
- 34. πάρα = πάρεστιν—i.e. the prep. is intensified in meaning and then suffers anastrophe.
- 35. ναθς Κροντες = κατέχοντες 'with their ships brought to, sit idle'. πάντες 'Αχ. = Hom. παναχαιοί 'Αχ. strictly applies to the main tribe of Greeks at Troy whose head-quarters were in Thessaly, but whose offshoots had spread to Peloponnese, Ithaca and Crete.
- 39. 'Homeward guiding their sea-dipt oars'. είθύνοντας, plural words agree with a sing. collective, especially when used of living beings, and then take their right gender. Cf. Aesch. Agam. 575, Τροίαν ελόντες...στόλος. Eur. Rhes. 46, στρατός... εφιέμενοι.

πλάτην—the 'blade', then the whole oar. Grimm's law tells us that  $\pi \lambda \acute{a} \tau \eta$  is connected with Engl. flat: while blade is etym. connected with  $\phi \acute{v} \lambda \lambda \sigma v$ , folium.

- 41. τόμβφ—a locative, like οἴκοι, κύκλφ, &c. [Or, a dat. commodi, 'an acceptable sacrifice and special honour for his tomb'.]
  - 43. ή πεπρωμένη—80. μοίρα οτ τύχη.
- 45. δυοΐν...δύο—these juxtapositions, which are notable in tragedians in the case of numbers (see 896), are due partly to the love of distinctness and clearness, but still more to rhetorical effect. Such are μόνοις μόνοις, mortali immortalitatem non arbitror contemnendam, 'faith unfaithful kept him falsely τος (Tennyson).

- 49. ἐξητησάμην—'I asked for myself and won'. Cf. Lat. exoro. A double accus. (for τυμβ. κυρῆσαι is virtually a substantive) as in Lat. is used with verbs of asking.
- 51. τούμον μεν ούν, κ.τ.λ.—'For my part, then, all that I wished to get will result'. τυχείν here has an accus.; so λαγγάνω usually and κυρώ in 697 for τούμον is subject of ξοται].
- 53. περά...πόδα—cf. Alk. 1153, νόστιμον δ' ελθοις πόδα. Verbs denoting motion of the body may be followed by a dat. or acc. of the part of the body in motion, e.g. βαίνειν πόδα, χαίνειν στόμα. In πόδα ἐπάσσειν, 1070, the prep. accounts for the transitive force. ὑπὸ σκηνής—' from under the tent' = ὑπέκ. There is no occasion to alter this reading: yet πρὸ, ἀπὸ have been suggested, and Porson adopts Musgrave's ὑπὲρ σκήνην, 'past or beyond the tent'. The constr. with gen. is justified by Hom. ὑπὸ ζύγον, Hes. ὑπὸ χθονός, &c.
- 54. 'Αγαμ.—H. in 'Troades' falls to lot of Odysseus: here of Agam.
- 55. ἤτις=quippe quae. 'Since in exchange for a royal home, thou hast seen a day of slavery'. ἐκ. So in Tro. 494, κὰν πέδψ κοίτας ἔχειν | ῥυσοῖσι νώτοις βασιλικῶν ἐκ δεμνίων.
- 56. πράσσει κακώς—'farest ill' must be carefully distinguished from ποιεῖι κακώς, 'behavest ill'.
- 57. ἀντισηκώσας—'some god is ruining thee, and has given thee compensation for thy former blessedness'. ἀντιπρίες counter balancing, and governs the gen. which follows. The word ἀντισηκ. is intrans. in Aesch. Pers. 437, ὡς τοίσδε καὶ δἰς ἀντισηκῶσαι ῥοπη, but if a trans. signf. seems necessary, φθορὰν may be supplied from φθείρει. [The idea of compensation is thoroughly Greek, and in its theological aspect is known as the doctrine of Nemesis.]
- [59—99. An interlude. Enter Hecuba, supported by Trojan ladies; she describes herself as troubled with presentiment of disaster, with nightly visions of a fawn torn by a wolf and dragged from her knees. She longs for Helenus or Kasandra to interpret the dream. Achilles too has appeared above his tomb and demanded the gift of a Trojan maid; may the gods avert the omen from her daughter!

[As to metre, see appendix. The dialect of lyric passages is Dorie, but the Dorie forms are not very consistently used by the different tragic writers. Its chief characteristics are the frequent use of a broad and rough  $\tilde{a}$  for  $\eta$  and  $\omega$ , and for out the gen. of 1st declension. Two letters are used where other Greeks employed a double consonant as  $\sigma\delta$  for  $\zeta$ , e.g.  $\mu\epsilon\lambda i\sigma\delta\sigma r\omega$ . The most eminent writers in old Doric were Tyrtaeus (the lame schoolmaster who encouraged the Spartans during the Messenian war), Alkman (about 630 B.c. chief Spartan lyric poet), Theognis (elegiac and gnomic poet born about 570), Epicharmus (comic poet of Kos and Sicily b. 540)].

- 59. δόμων—tents of Achæan camp.
- 60. δρθούσαι— 'supporting'.

The the reading of all MSS., more vigorous, lifelike, and better Gk. than  $\nu \bar{\nu} \nu$  which Pors. reads, and which perhaps crept in as an amplification.

64. μου γεραιάς, κ.τ.λ.—'taking me by my aged arm'. This gen. comes under class partitive, and its use is analogous to that with ξοραι (398) and other verbs of seizing, grasping, holding, which have a gen. of the object. We say 'by' or 'on'; so Theocr. 4. 35, τὸν ταῦρον…ἀγε πιάξας | τᾶς ἀπλᾶς, 'seized it by the hoof'.

γεραΐας—obs. quantity of -aι. Cf. El. 497, παλάιόν τε θησαύρισμα, see 82, n. Pors. suggests without reading γραιᾶς. προσλαζ.—if any force is to be assigned to πρός it must be that of taking to oneself. λαζύμαι is the form preferred by Attic poets especially Eur. to λάζομαι, Ep. and Ion. collateral form of λαμβάνω.

65 sqq. 'And I propping myself on a bent arm as on a staff will hasten the crawling motion of my limbs setting one foot before the other'. H.'s own arm, linked (δω) with that of her ladies, forms her stick: the epithet 'bent' is transferred from the stick to the arm; observe that Greek usage limits by an adj. a metaphor which seems too strong: e.g. Aesch. calls vultures Ζηνός κύνες, but corrects the metaphor at once by adding ἀκραγεῖς, 'dogs, but not barking dogs'. So here Eur. calls an arm σκίπωνα, but adds σκολιόν, because real sticks are straight, not crooked. The gen. thus used is called a definitive gen. [Two other interpretations are given, (1) a real stick. Cf. Cic. de div. 1. 30, incurvum et leviter a summo INFLEXUM BACULLUM: then χερός means 'by my hand' and προτιθεῖσα may govern σκίπωνα supplied from σκίπων. (2) 'supporting myseel by

- 67. dp0pww—strictly the socket of a joint ( $\sqrt{AB}$ , cf. artus, arms), and is generally joined with other more specific words, as  $d\rho\theta\rho\alpha \ \pi \sigma \delta\sigma\Omega\nu$ ,  $d\rho\theta\rho\alpha \ \tau d\nu \ \kappa \iota \kappa \lambda \omega \nu$ , 'the eyes',  $d\rho\theta\rho\alpha \ \sigma \tau \delta\mu\alpha\tau \sigma s$ , 'mouth'. &c.
- 68. & στερ. Διός—'O flashing light of day'. A similarly strong phrase is used by Soph., Trach. 99, λαμπρξ στεροπφ φλεγέθων, of the sun. So 709, Διός φάος.
- 69. 'Why, O why am I excited thus?' wore as tandem in Lat., of strong appeals. This is a rather unusual sense of alpopua equivalent to  $\mu \epsilon \tau \epsilon \omega \rho t_0 \mu a \epsilon$ . Everyos—the Greeks prefer the adjectival form to  $\tau \hat{v} \nu \kappa \tau t_1$ : it is a poetic form, more usually exproyers which is of three terminations, exprayer of only two.
- 70. 'O sovereign earth, mother of darkwinged dreams' (i.e. illomened, 705). Pors. wished to transpose this with & σκοτ. νοξ, 68, but χθών includes the nether world whence dreams come. πότνια—one of the very few fem. trisyllables in -ιά [cf. δμπνια], a poetical title of honour used in Hom. of persons only, but in tragic poets often used as an epithet of earth.
  - 72. dποπέμπομαι—'I deprecate'. Lat. abominor.
- 73. dv—rdv is suggested metri gratia to make final syllable of öψιν long. σωζομένου—an instance of tragic irony; for the audience knew that her son was dead.
- 76.  $\xi\delta d\eta \nu$ —'I noticed and understood' if we retain  $\delta \psi_{\nu} \nu$   $\xi_{\mu}a\theta \nu$ . This means she took particular heed to the dream: its interpretation she knew not, for she wishes to consult Helenus or Kasandra.  $\dot{\epsilon}\delta \dot{a}\eta \nu$ —is sor. pass. from  $\sqrt{\delta a}$ ,  $\delta d\omega$  not being found: it is only used in the Chorus of Attic poetry.
- 79. & χθον. θεολ—'ye nether gods', see 70; better than 'gods of the country', with which cf. Lat. dit indigetes, more appropriate but with less authority. σώσατε—notice the distinction between the momentary agrist and the continuous present τοῦ σωζομένου.
- 80. ἄγκυρ' ἄτ' ἐμῶν—this is the excellent emendation of Pors, after Reiske, ἄτε being a particle of comparison. Other readings are  $\ell\tau'$  ἀγκ. ἀμῶν,  $\ell\pi'$  ἐμῶν, for the original ἄγκυρά  $\tau'$  ἐμῶν which is objectionable from the position of  $\tau\epsilon$ , yet we have a parallel in 426, and in the position of que in elegiac verse, e.g. Tib. 1. 3. 56, Messallam terra dum sequiturque mari, and even in prose as Cic. inter nosque. [The metaphor in ἀγκυρα is common in all languages; perhaps H. refers to Polyd. in these strong and at first sight exaggerated terms (for Helenus and Kas. were still alive) because he was the only child still at liberty].

- 81. χιονώδη—most words in -οειδης remain uncontracted, as κερατοειδής, μονοειδής, -οει should strictly be contracted into or as δηλοῖς for δηλόεις, but θεοειδής contracts into θεουδής. Θρήκην, Ep. and Ion. form of Θράκην preferred by tragedians, though in other cases they choose the Doric as 'Αθάνα. κατέχε, 'dwells in'.
- 82. πατρίου—so the best MS. Old reading was πατρφου which involved a difficulty in quantity. φυλακαΐουν—Greek idiom uses the plural in many words where we use the sing, e.g. πλοῦτοι, γέλωτες, ἔνδειαι, κρέα, πυροί, κριθαί, ἄλες, 265, n.
- 83. The velov—'Some new sorrow will hap'.  $\nu \epsilon_0 \nu$ , like novae res, usually implies something untoward. The Greeks made great use of their neuts. sing. and plur. as in such phrases as  $\mu \hat{\omega} \rho \alpha \phi \rho \nu \epsilon \hat{\nu}_{\nu}$ ,  $\kappa \alpha \lambda \hat{\sigma} \nu \hat{\sigma} \epsilon \delta \epsilon \nu$ ,  $\mu \alpha \chi \eta \tau \hat{\epsilon} \sigma \nu$  (- $\tau \hat{\epsilon} \alpha$ )  $\hat{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \hat{\nu}_{\nu}$ .
- 85. dlastes—'at no other time does my soul thus unceasingly shudder and quail'. The der. is  $\sqrt{\kappa \lambda \nu}$ , cf.  $\nu \epsilon \phi o s$  and  $\kappa \nu \epsilon \phi a s$ ,  $\chi \lambda a \bar{\nu} \nu a$  and lana, and its general sense is 'unbending' as we see in Hom. who uses it of war, battle, lamentation. Il, 24. 549,  $\mu \eta \delta^2$  dlastes  $\delta \delta \nu \rho e o$ , 'mourn not incessantly'.
  - 86. φρίσσει, ταρβεί-asyndeton, usual in agitation.
- 87. ποῦ ποτε—'where ever'. So τί ποτε, 69. θείαν—'inspired', hence 'divining'=μαντικήν. Cf. Aen. 3. 373 (of Helenus) canit divino ex ore sacerdos. Helenus, son of Priam and Hec.; later traditions say that he was the only grown son of Priam who survived the Trojan war, and that he deserted the Trojans and married Andromache after Neoptolemus' death. Kasandra was endowed with prophetic powers by Apollo, but no one would believe her. On the taking of Troy, Agam. won her and took her home to Mykenæ, when his wife Klytemnestra murdered her from jealousy; see 1275.

- 88. to the—conj. deliberativus [unless we call it like tδωμαι a Homeric fut.]. Goodwin, § 213. 2. Kaστίνδρας—this reading instead of Κάσανδρας removes the difficulty which was felt about 'Ελ. ψυχάν as though Hel. were already dead and only his soul could be spoken of; the phrase is equivalent to Ελενον simply.
- 89. kpluwgiv—if, when two or more substs. are joined by  $\mathbf{j} = \mathbf{i} \mathbf{o} \mathbf{r}$ , the verb applies indifferently to both, it is put in the plur. e.g. Alk. 367,  $\kappa al \ \mu$ ' of  $\theta$ ' of l lloottwing  $\kappa \omega \omega r \mid o \theta \theta$ ' own l www l  $u \times u \times u$  of  $u \times u$  . There is therefore no need to read  $\kappa al$  for  $\mathbf{j}$  in 88.
- 90. ydp—the inferential force here is nil, and the particle merely introduces the dream.
- βαλιάν—' dappled'  $\sqrt{\beta}$ αλ- same word as varius. Eur. himself explains the word Iph. Aul. 221 (of the horses of Eumelus), λευκοστίκτ $\psi$  τριχ! βαλιάν.
- 91. σφαζομέναν...σπασθ.—79, n. dvolκτως, the excellent reading of Pors., see metrical note.
- 92. τόδε—viz. what follows, so in Thuc., τάδε ξλεγον commences, ταῦτα ξλεγον ends a speech.
- 96. ητει—'was urgent in asking', notice force of imperf.
  γέρας, a gift of honour, strictly that called also εξαιρετόν, which the chiefs received before division of the spoil.
  - 99. dno...πέμψατε—by tmesis for ἀποπέμψατε, 'avert'.
- 100-154. #doolog-The chorus of Trojan captive women, 15 in number, enter the orchestra from the side, and marching either in ranks (κατά ζυγά) or files (κατά στοίχους), muster round the  $\theta \nu \mu \epsilon \lambda \eta$ , the raised altar of Dionysus in the centre of the orchestra, whence the κορυφαίος would direct its movements. They say, 'We have left our master's tents not to lighten your sorrow, but as heralds of woe. Achilles has asked for a victim, and the Greeks in conclave have resolved to offer your daughter. In the debate, Agam. from regard to Kasandra, advocated your cause, but the opposition urged that Achilles' spear was worth more than Kasandra's bed. Odysseus turned the scale, with the plea that none should stand up among the dead and reproach Greeks for thanklessness to Greeks. He will be here anon to seize your daughter-supplicate the gods: so you will save yourself bereavement, or else you must see your daughter die'.

- 101. δεσποσύνους—' of my master'. Attributive adjectives are used in Gk. and Lat. where we employ a preposition, e.g. Τελαμώνιε παῖ, son of Telamon, 'Αχιλεία λόγχη, 131, filius erilis, 'master's son'. Sullanus exercitus, 'Sulla's army'.
- 102. ** * ἐκληρ.—' to which I was apportioned by lot', with this sense of motion implied in ** La, cf. Thuc. 4. 48. 6, ἐς τὴν Σικελίαν, ἐνα περ τὸ πρῶτον ὥρμηντο, ἀποπλεύσαντες. There is a constant interchange of ποῦ and ποῦ and such adverbs, just as we use 'where' and 'whither' rather loosely. [The captives would stand round: each warrior's κλῆρος, marked, would be put into a helmet, a maiden would step forward, the helmet be shaken and the girl assigned to him whose lot leaped out].
- 104. λογχ. alx. δοριθήρ.—' captured at the spear's point'. This is a pleonasm, especially dear to tragedians, e.g. 66, Phoen. 328, ἀπεπλος φάρεων, El. 310, ἀνέορτος Ιερῶν.
- 106, 7. 'In no respect lightening thee of thy calamities, but having taken on myself a heavy weight of tidings'. odder—is an adverb, as appears from the use of  $d\pi o \kappa o v \phi$ . in Or. 1341,  $\sigma e$  is easily supplied. The gen. is one of separation.  $d\rho \phi \mu e \nu q$ —the long  $\bar{\alpha}$  is accounted for by the fact that  $dl \rho \omega$  is contracted from  $del \rho \omega$ .
- 109. 'For in full conclave of the Achs. it is said that it was resolved to make thy daughter a sacrifice to Achilles'.  $\delta o \kappa \epsilon \omega$ , a legal t. t. especially of public resolutions, e.g.  $\epsilon \delta o \xi \epsilon \tau \hat{\eta}$   $\delta o \psi \lambda \hat{\eta}$ ,  $\tau \hat{\omega} \delta \eta \omega \omega$ , so senatui placere in Lat.
- 111. τόμβ. ἐπιβds—'mounted the tomb'. ἐπὶ means 'towards', and denotes the action of alighting upon.
- 112. olog'  $\delta \tau \epsilon = meministi \ quum$ , see 239 for this sense of cloga, there is a conjecture  $\delta \tau \iota$  which is decidedly weaker, and Schaefer observes that the Greeks used a particle of time quite unnecessarily, e.g. 307,  $\delta \tau a \mu = \epsilon \omega$ . Xpouréous—'armour inlaid with gold', unless this epithet apply to it as made by a god, after the epic manner.  $\sigma \delta \nu \delta \pi \lambda$ —is a usual Homeric mode of expression, 'with his armour on'.
- 113. 'Stayed the ships from going to sea, though their sails were braced on the halyards,' i.e. ready to start. -

- a usual epithet of ships: here it adds point to  $\epsilon\sigma\chi\epsilon$ , and becomes almost proleptic.  $\sigma\chi\epsilon\delta$ .—properly rafts for the nonce. Thuc. 1. 10 conjectures from Homer's statement the size of the ships which went to Troy, the largest holding 120 men, the smallest 50.
- 114. where.—is more properly the sheet which held the mast in its place, fastened to the prow.  $\lambda n l \phi \eta$ —is acc. of ref. where  $\alpha$  to the provides of instrument, unless  $\epsilon \pi \epsilon_p \epsilon_p \epsilon_p \delta$ , have a transitive sense, as in L. and S. Cf. Hor. Sat. 1. 6. 74, laevo suspensi loculos tabulamque lacerto, and 910.
- 115. Eutrown—'by this loud chiding', perhaps strictly of the cry of an animal, akin to  $\theta$  is a lynx through  $\sqrt{\text{krug}} = '$  to cry'. It is used as a hunting term,  $\kappa vol \theta w \dot{t} \xi a \iota$ , Hippol. 219, and when applied to men denotes a loud impulsive shout. Soph. uses it of the cry of Ajax (4j. 308, 335).
- 116. 'Whither then set ye forth?'—δη like δῆτα strongly emphasizes a question. Δαναοί—according to Mr Gladstone is a purely military denomination; historically or politically the Greeks could not be so called in the heroic age.
- 118—121. 'Then clashed there waves of frequent strife, and through the warrior Hellenic host there 'gan to pass two diverse streams of opinion, some minded to present a sacrifice at the tomb, some not'. ξυνέπαισε,—intrans. as in Assch. Prom. 885, θολεροὶ δὲ λόγοι παίουν εἰκῆ | στυγκῆς πρὸς κύμασω ἀτης. The MS. reading ξυνέπεσε is unmetrical. τύμβω—locative. Cf. 31 n. δοκοῦν—aco, absol. see 506. This construction is confined to neut. participles, mostly some simple word or compound of εἰμὶ, e. g. ἐνόν, παρόν, ἐζόν, δόξαν, δέσν.
- 122. 'Eagerly advancing thy interest, constant in honour to the bed of the inspired prophetess', i.e. Kasandra. dvéxwv—so Soph. Aj. 212, érel  $\sigma\epsilon$  léxos δουριάλωτον |  $\sigma\tau\epsilon\rho\xi$ as ανέχει θούριος Alas.
- 125. τω Θησ.—Demophoon and Akamas his sons by Phaedra. είω—'two scions' 20 n.
- 126. δισσών—'two', not dissonant, which would be διπλών. We have in Soph. Aj. 57, δισσοί 'Ατρείδαι. The rhetorical opposition δισσών...μά is quite Euripidean, 45 n., 896.
- 128. στεφανοῦν—double idea of 'crowning' and 'honouring' as schol. says, comes from crowning victors at games. Cf. Soph. Ant. 431, χοαῖσι τρισπόνδοισι τὸν νέκυν στέφει.

- 129. χλωρφ-(χλοή, tender grass), 'fresh, young'. α-κοαιφνές, 537, conveys same idea,
- 130. 'They declared they would never set K.'s couch before A.'s spear', or rather 'the warrior Achilles'. See 101 n.
- 132. 'Now well-nigh equal was the zeal for the hotly-contended arguments, till the wily-minded, bullying, sweet-tongued people-courtier', &c. κατατειν. Τhe κατά is intensitive. ποικιλόφρων—an echo of Homer's epithet ποικιλομήτης, which however is an epithet of honour. κόπις—practically same as κοπίς 'an axe or chopper'. The Schol. explains 'orator' but the idea of κόπτω requires to be brought out. Possibly 'incisive' as Paley suggests; but there is a pointed antithesis: Odys. would be bully or fawner to serve his puspose. Eur. was perhaps thinking of Hyperbolus, or Kleophon the demagogue, or some contemporary.
- 135.  $\pi\epsilon \theta \theta \epsilon \ell \pi \epsilon i \sigma \epsilon$  would be the true grammatical sequence after  $\pi \rho l \nu$ , but that would imply that the effect of the principal verb had altogether passed: the present tense brings the result on to the time of the speaker's remark.
- 137. δούλων σφαγίων—=δουλίων. Cf. στρατόν αλχμήτην 120, δούλης γυναικός 1253, servum pecus. Hor.
  - 141. 'Who have died for the sake of'.
- 143. 'Now Odys. will be here almost immediately to drag away', &c. δσονούκ—so ὅτι μὴ, ὄσονοῦκω (Thuc.). Lat. tantum non. dφλξων—corresponds rather to supine in -um than to fut. participle, to detractum rather than detracturus.
- 144. πῶλον—the young of any animal, men included; so μόσχον, of a young girl, 526, πῶλος, of a youth, Phoen. 954.
- 146. vaods—supply προς from latter part of sentence; so Hel. 863, Τροίας δὲ σωθείς κάπο βαρβάρου χθονός.
- 148. **prove—'loudly call upon', 'hail', as we speak of hailing a ship. The ancients looked with suspicion on silent prayer,
- 149.  $\gamma$ atav—the reading of MSS., corrected to  $\gamma$ alas by Pors, for sake of metre. But  $-a\nu$  is lengthened in the pause, see 83, metrical note.
- 151. oppavov—in Att. sometimes of two terminations. Cl. 296, 592.

152 sqq. 'Or thou must see thy virgin prostrate before the tomb, incarnadined with blood as it runs in dark-gleaming flow from her gold-decked throat'. τύμβου—depends on προin προπετή. Two MSS. read τύμβου locative. χρυσοφόρου—refers to usual adornment of maidens. Cf. II. 2. 872 (of a young warrior) δε καὶ χρυσὸν ξχων πολέμονδ' [εν., ήθτε κούρη, though by the analogy of Suppl. 1054 the adorning may be for sacrifice. νασμ. μελαν.—in apposition with αίματ.

[155-443. First Episode. After Hecuba's monody, a series of expressions of woe, and the attempts of Polyxena to console her, which conclude with a lament that she cannot share her mother's slavery, and a noble expression of disregard for her own life (155, 215), the action of the play continues. Odys. enters: Hec. appeals to him for protection on the score of past favours shown. Odys. urges the extreme necessity of not neglecting due honours to the brave, and the scene closes with the removal of Polyx. H. faints.]

- 156.  $\dot{\mathbf{a}} \mathbf{\chi} \dot{\boldsymbol{\omega}}$ —Doric for  $\dot{\eta} \mathbf{\chi} \dot{\boldsymbol{\omega}}$ .
- 157. δειλαία γήρως—'forlorn because of'. This is analogous to the gen. of exclamation, as τοῦ χασμήματος, 'what a swallow!' Goodwin, § 173. 3.
- 159.  $\phi \omega \tilde{\alpha}s$ —poetical form of  $\phi o \rho \eta \tau \tilde{\eta}s$ , i.e. verbal from  $\phi \epsilon \rho \omega$ , not  $\phi o \rho \epsilon \omega$ .
- 160. 'Who is my helper? what child? what city?' ποία—differs but little from τίς. γέννα.—[This word can lengthen the final syllable, as in Iph. Taur. 159, like τόλμα in Pindar; γενεά is read by Pors. to avoid the difficulty;] the word may fairly mean either 'child' or 'people' just as Eur. uses Σπάρτων γέννα, Φρυγῶν γέννα, Κενταύρων γέννα.
- 162. φροῦδος—'is dead', lit. 'gone'; so οίχομαι, βέβηκα. The der. is πρὸ-οδός, cf. φροίμιον, φρούριον.
- 164.  $\pi$ of 8'  $\eta\sigma\omega$ ;—strictly an acc. is required as with  $\delta\rho\mu\dot{\alpha}\omega$  and verbs of sending; many amendments have been proposed. Schol. reads  $\eta\sigma\omega$  from  $l\eta\mu=eo$  for which there is no evidence. Musgrave,  $\pi\circ\delta$   $\delta$ '  $\eta\sigma\omega$   $\pi\circ\delta\alpha$ ;  $\tau\iota$ s.
- 166. 'O daughters of Troy that have brought evil tidings'. Τρφάδες—like Troiugenae and Aeneadae, &c. Reference is to 107.
- 169. 'No more to me is life in this light of day object of desire'. βίος ἐν φάκι—little more than βίος. Hom. Odys. 10. 498, ἔτι ζώκιν καὶ ὀρᾶν φάος ἡελίοιο.

- 172. aildy—the tent where Polyx. is.
- 172 sqq. See introd, for bearing of this passage on the date of play.
  - 176. φάμαν—'tidings'. VFA cf. φημλ, fama, fari.
- 179. καρύξασ'—We should rather have expected the fut. for H. as yet had announced little or nothing. ωστ'—Ερ. particle of comparison, but found in 204 of this play.
- 180. ἐξέπταξαs—Dor. = ἐξέπτηξαs, 'startled me from the tents'. πτήσσω is usually intrans. 'crouch', except perhaps in Il. 14, 40, πτήξε δὲ θυμὸν ἐνὶ στήθεσσιν Αχαιῶν.
- 182. φρ. μοι κακά—'a sad prelude methinks'. μοι, ethical dat.
- 184. Καύδα κρύψης Notice change in tense: latter makes a more definite request: the line is copied from Il. 1. 363, εξαύδα μη κεῦθε νοῷ, ἴνα εἴδομεν ἄμφω.
- 185. Sup.... avac tives—an elliptical mode of speech. 'I fear (and fearing doubt) why thou liftest up (dva) thy voice in lament'.
- 189 sqq. 'A public decree of the Argives unanimously aims at thy slaughter at the tomb in honour of Peleus' son', mpos τόμβον—acc. implies the process of dragging her to the tomb. Πηλεία γέννα—this reading avoids the difficulty which is found in the common reading Πηλείδα γέννα, for that would be Neoptolemus, not Achilles. [The variants are (1) Πηλείδα γέννα, and dat. κοινά γνώμα, 'the child of P. intends by common decree;' (2) 'Αργ. γέννα might='Αργεῖοι, like more common γένος; (3) γέννα may be voc. 'O my child'].
- 193. ἀμέγαρτα κακῶν—'how utterest thou most unenviable woes'= ἀφθόνητα, some have preferred the idea of ἄφθονος, 'unstinted', 'numerous'. The neut, plur. thus joined with a gen. is very common; and is imitated by Hor. amara curarum, dura navis (gen.).
- 197. µol—dat. eth.; notice the elegance of its position. These lines are at first sight weak after 189—191, but the repetition is full of pathos.
- 199. δυστ. μάτερ βιστάs—Take these words together and make δ. β. gen. of quality, so 211. Observe that Eur. is very fond of repeating a word or phrase in choral parts.

- 203. was 68'-'I thy child here', like hic, δδε is used of a speaker indicating himself.
  - 205. μόσχον-142 n.
- 207. "Aιδα—'to Hades', dat. of motion is not common, it recalls Hom. Il. 1. 3, "Aiδι προταψεν. So in Lat. it clamor caelo (Verg.), nigro compulerit gregi (Hor.).
- 213. 'But my life, its outrage and its shame, I weep not after' ( $\mu e \tau d$ ), i.e. she does not regret the loss of life. Cf. Med. 996,  $\mu e \tau a \sigma \tau t \nu \rho u u \delta t \delta \tau d \lambda \gamma o s$ . Other translations are (1) therewith, at same time, (2) too late, after the event, (3) with a notion of change, i.e. from death to life.
  - 214.  $\theta a v \in \hat{v} = \tau \delta \theta a v \in \hat{v}$ .
- 216. kal µŋv—'and lo', usual formula for introducing a new person on stage, as in oratory it begins a new argument, and in description a new incident.
- [217—250. Enter Odysseus. He reminds H. of the decree and says that he has come to take away her daughter; he advises submission and deprecates all violence. H. in reply mourns that she did not die before, and saks leave to put a question, if a slave may be allowed to address a freeman. She recalls his visit as a spy to Troy, her discovery and concealment of him, his urgent entreaties for life, and her saving of him.]
  - 218. γύναι—'lady', a title of respect.
  - 219. κρανθείσαν—' ratified'.
  - 221. πρός όρθ. χώμα-190 n.
- 224. ἔπεσται—This is the excellent emend. of Nauck for usual ἐπέστη which is tame after ἐπιστάτης.
- 225. clot obv 8 8paov—'dost thou know what to do? neither be torn from her by violence nor come to any conflict of blows with me'. This curious phrase which means properly 'do, dost thou know what?' recurs often in Eur., Soph. and Aristoph.
- 227. 'Know thy powers', i.e. thy real powerlessness. Cf. Xen. Anab. 1. 6. 7, δποτ' αὐ έγνως τὴν σεαυτοῦ δύναμιν.
- 228. 'Tis wise, I ween, even in troubles, to have wise thoughts'. Tot gnomic, i.e. its province is to introduce a proverb or sentiment.

- 234. 'But if a slave may ask questions of the free, neither grievous nor vexing to the heart, then it is befitting that thy speech indeed should have been spoken but that thou shoulds hear me when I ask these questions'. [Prof. Paley follows a scholiast in making  $\sigma ol = \pi \rho b s$   $\sigma \dot{e}_i$  'tis to thee our speech must be addressed', but this loses the force of the tense. Weil, objecting that Qdysseus had finished speaking and that Hecuba did not wish him to cease entirely, conjectures  $\sigma \dot{e} \ \mu \dot{e}\nu \ \dot{e}\rho \omega r \hat{a}\sigma \theta a \iota \chi \rho e \dot{\omega} r$ .]
- 235, μη—not ob, because the statement is general, 237. Hec. speaks of herself in the plur. and the rule is that in such cases the masc. must be used.
- 238. xp6vou—causal gen. after verb of envying. 'I do not grudge thee on the count of time'. Goodwin, § 173. 1,
  - 239. olo 0a -- 'dost remember?'
- 240. 'And from thy eyes gouts of blood dripped down upon thy chin'. The allusion is not to his weeping 'tears of blood', but to his general ghastly appearance when he entered Troy as a spy and had mutilated himself, pretending that the Greeks had maltreated him. The story is told by Hom. Od. 4. 244 sqq., where Helen not Hecuba recognises him: as the schol. remarks, Hec. would hardly have let him go.  $\phi \delta \beta \omega v$  and  $\delta \delta \lambda \omega v$  have been conjectured, and if adopted, then  $\sigma \tau \alpha \lambda$ . would refer only to 'tears'.
- 242. 'Yes, for it did not touch merely the surface of my heart', i.e. it cut deep. The gen. is partitive.
- 244. µeuv...iA96vres—the participle is regularly used after vbs. of emotion. 397. The constr. is imitated by Verg. Aen. 2. 877, sensit...delapsus in hostis, i.e. se delapsum fuisse.
- 246. 'Yea, till my hand grew numbed within thy robes'. The ye confirms the previous speaker's assertion and adds a new feature.
  - 247. δήτα-' prithee'.
- [251—295. Hecuba to Odys. 'You owe me gratitude not unkindness. I hate you orators who speak to please, careless what injury you inflict. Why was my daughter to die, a human sacrifice, where a beast would have served? Achilles has no grudge against her; Helen, alike as the cause of mischief and as the loveliest, would have been the best victim. Such is the plea of equity. For you, I claim your gratitude:

give me a life for a life: you have power I know, but use it not unlawfully; go, urge the Greeks to change the decree; ye did not always kill women; your law is to care alike for slave and free—and your prestige would persuade them even against their interests.

- 251. βουλεύμασιν—' because of these schemes', causal dat.
- 252. ξπαθες-'didst experience'.
- 253. Súv $\eta = \delta i \nu a \sigma a i$ —there is no occasion to regard this as a subj.: indeed, though there are occasional instances of such use, yet more properly  $\delta \nu$  should be inserted to complete the constr.  $\delta i \nu a$ , which Pors. preferred, is condemned by Herm. as a Doric form.
- 254. 'All the sort of you who affect a speaker's fame'. Eur. has clearly in mind some reference to a contemporary: he had an intense dislike of mere oratory apart from principle, as we see from Oτ. 907, ὅταν γὰρ ἡδὺς τοῖς λόγοις, φρονῶν κακῶς | πείθη τὸ πλήθος, τῆ πόλει κακὸν μέγα. Aristoph.'s savage attacks upon him in this respect are most unfair.
- 258. 'But pray what policy did they find in this—that they determined upon a vote of death against this my daughter'.
- 260. τὸ χρῆν—poet. form of χρῆναι. The suggestion χρεών is unnecessary. σφε is used of all genders sing. and plur.
  - 263. τείνα φόνον—'aims death', metaphor from a bow.
- 264. «Ιργασται—'has done him no hurt'. This middle sense of perf. pass. is found more especially in words meaning doing or performing. This particular word is in Soph. always middle. Cf. ἡρμαι, γέγραμμαι, παρεσκεύασμαι.
- 265. προσφάγματα—there is not much additional point in the plur. and there is a variant πρόσφαγμά τι. We find an analogy in 616 σκηνώματα. Soph. Antig. 568, νυμφεῖα = νύμφην, see 82 n.
  - 266. ἄλεσεν...äγει—for change of tense see 21 n.
- 268. σύχ ήμῶν τόδε— this is not our concern'. H. means that on the score of beauty as well as of just vengeance Helen was the more suitable victim.
- 269. ἐκπρεπεστάτη—' supereminent'. The MSS, vary between this and εὐπρεπεστάτη.

- 271. 'On score of justice this is my contention and argument'. The phrase = τήνδε τὴν ἄμιλλαν λόγου ἀμιλλῶμαι. She wishes to contrast the plea of equity with her personal appeal to gratitude of Odys.
  - 274. ypalas—Valckenaer's correction for the unmetrical yepalâs, but see 64 n.
  - 275. σου—partitive gen. after τῶν αὐτῶν, 'the same parts of thee', i.e. hand and cheek.
    - 280. 4 84- 'for she'.
  - 282. τοὺς κρατοῦντας—plur. used to prevent too direct a reference to Odys. & μη χρεών 'in unlawful things'. μη is used because the whole class of things unlawful is included. Cf. Bacch. 515, δτι γὰρ μη χρεών οῦτοι χρεών παθεῦν. χρεών is indeclinable. Cf. Shakespeare, Measure for Measure, 'it is excellent | to have a giant's strength, but tyrannous | to use it like a giant'.
  - 283.  $\pi pdfav$  is properly referred back to  $\tau o \dot{\phi} s \kappa \rho a \tau$ . as subject,
  - 284. ἡν ποτ'—implying that it is so no more. Cf. fuinus Troes (Verg.), [perhaps εὐτυχοῦσα may be supplied].
  - 285. Double acc. is used after verbs of depriving. Goodwin, § 164. This may be explained as a combination of direct and indirect accusatives 'robbed me as to'.
    - 286. 3 φίλ. γέν.—here she takes him by the beard.
  - 288. \*\*\*apayoparov—'counsel them to change' ( $\pi a \rho d$ ). The words introduced by  $\omega$ s (= nam) are the comment of H., not the words which Odys. is to use in council.  $\phi$ 86vos equivalent to  $\nu \epsilon \mu \epsilon \sigma v$ , i.e. it excites the anger of the gods.
  - 291. 84—'for'. Here Eur. refers to heroic times the custom of his own age. Demosth. in Mid. p. 529 gives us the law of  $i\beta\rho s$  or outrage, and says that slaves and free were treated alike.
  - 298—5. 'Thy prestige, though it speak but ill, will persuade them: for the same speech has not the same weight when it comes from the insignificant as (when it comes) from those of repute'.  $\lambda t_{\gamma \gamma \gamma}$ —is the MS. reading, and cannot be the same in sense as  $\lambda t_{\gamma \gamma \gamma}$  which is substituted for it. There is no doubt some violence to language in saying that 'his prestige speaks', but  $d\xi t_{\gamma \gamma \gamma}$  was the personification of an abs straction. Cf. Hipp. 11, ἀγνοῦ Πίτθεως παιδεύματα. [κακῶς—is sometimes interpreted 'against their interest', under the idea that Odys. as a notable speaker would not be disparaged by any accusation of indifferent pleading.]

295. τῶν δοκούντων—a recognised phrase = εὐδοκίμων, hence perhaps the use of the article: cf. Troades, 609, where τὰ δοκοῦντα and τὰ μηδέν δντα are contrasted.

296. στερρός—151 n.

297. HTIS= $\ddot{\omega}\sigma\tau\epsilon$ —'as not to shed a tear'. So also the simple relative  $\delta s$ . Hel. 501,  $\dot{\alpha}v\eta\rho$   $\gamma d\rho$  oddels  $\dot{\omega}\delta\epsilon$   $\beta d\rho\beta a\rho\sigmas$   $\phi\rho\dot{\epsilon}vas$  |  $\delta s$   $\delta vo\mu$ '  $d\kappa \omega \sigma as$   $\tau \omega \dot{\nu}\dot{\rho}\dot{\nu}$   $v\omega$   $\delta \dot{\omega}\sigma\epsilon$   $\epsilon$   $\beta o\rho dv$ . Cf. Scott, Lay,

Breathes there the man with soul so dead,

Who never to himself hath said, This is my own, my native land!'

[299—331. Odys. to Hec. 'You personally I can save: but I cannot gainsay my promise to give your daughter to the bravest warrior we had. To do so would be bad in principle: for states would suffer if their champions were not duly honoured: no one would take the field if he thought his bravery would not command respect. I myself should like to have honour paid to my tomb, however little might suffice me in life. And do not imagine yourself alone in suffering; we, too, have aged widows. So endure: we will take the consequences of our reverence of our warriors: you barbarians may do as you will, and reap the proper fruits of your conduct'.]

299. 'Be advised and do not by reason of thy anger regard in thy mind thy good counsellor as a foe'. διδάσκου—(mid.) usu. = 'get some one taught'. τῷ δυμουμένω—article and neut. participle equal a subst.; a constr. very common in Thucydides. δυσμενή is the predicate.

301. τὸ μὲν σὸν σῶμα—'thy person'. So Soph. Ant. 675, τῶν δ' ὀρθουμένων | σώζει τὰ πολλὰ σώμαθ' ἡ πειθαρχία.

302. κούκ ἄλλως λέγω—'and not idly do I speak'.

307. πρόθυμος—' ready'.

308. φέρηται—' wins for himself no more than his inferiors'. Cf. Soph. Ant. 637, έμοι γάρ οὐδεις αξιώσεται γάμος | μείζον φέρεσθαί σου καλῶς ήγουμένου.

309. "imutu—'at our hands'. Almost a dative of the agent.
311. 'Is not this shame to us if we make use of a friend while he lives, but when he is dead no longer treat him in friendly wise?' There is a double sense here of χρώμαι—(1) to make use of a person, as in Xen. Anab. 1. 4. 8, καὶ ἐρεῖ οὐδεἰς ώς ἐγὰ, ἔως μὲν ἄν παρῷ τις, χρώμαι, ἐπειδὰν δὲ ἀπιέναι βούληται κ.τ.λ. (2) = uti amico, 'to treat as a friend'. [Cobet, Obs. Criticae, suggests ἐχρώμεθ', bringing into more striking contrast the different times, past and present.] βλέποντι is used as οἱ βλέποντες, 'the living'. Cf. Ter. Eun. 73, vivus videnague pereo.

312. Shake—the MS. reading, softened down by some to

315. Φιλοψυχήσομεν—'play the coward'. Observe that this line is spoken by Odys. as his own sentiment: if he had put it into the mouth of anyone else, the conjunctive would have been used.

317. και μήν—'and look you', 216 n. καθ' ήμέρ.—connect closely with the words which follow, 'if with but small supply day by day'. και ει states an imaginary or reluctantly admitted, εί καί an actual case.

319. 'But my tomb I should like to see deemed worthy of honour'. 'opacta-mid. but probably in poetry=active.

320. διά μακρ.—' for long lasting is the reward'. The sentiment is like that which Antigone expresses (Soph. Ant. 76), where she refuses to please the living rather than the dead, έκτι γὰρ del κείσομαι.

823. $6&-Epic form common enough in Aesch, but otherwise of doubtful tragic usage.

824. γυμφίων τητ.—Goodwin, § 174.

325. κεύθει—act. in sense whereas the perf. κέκευθα is often intrans. 'is buried', cf. ἔρειπω, ἥριπον, ἴστημι, ἔστηκα.

326 seq. 'If our custom of honouring the dead is a mistaken one we shall (willingly) incur the charge of folly, but do ye barbarians neither regard your friends as friends, nor admire those who have bravely died, that so Hellas may prosper and ye may win reward to match your thoughts' (i.e. may suffer because you refuse to honour the dead). [kakês may be, but not so well, taken with  $\tau\iota\mu\hat{a}r$ .]

326. τόλμα τάδ'—' endure this'.

327. δφλ.—strictly, to lose a lawsuit'. Cf. Soph. Ant. 470, σχεδόν τι μωρώ μωρίαν όφλισκάνω, and debeo in Hor. Od. 1. 14. 15, tu nisi ventis | debes ludibrium, cave.

- 330. 4s 4v—'that so'. It is difficult to see that any change is effected by introd. of 4v which in Hom. and Hdt. is used with opt. as well as subj. Goodwin, § 216, 1. n. 2. [Herm. says=4ummodo, 'provided that'.]
- [332-341. The Chor. laments slavery as an evil. Hec. appeals to her daughter to attempt Odys, with all sweet notes of woe: for he, too, has children, and will pity her fate.]
- 332. 'Slavery, what an evil is it ever, and it tolerates indignities under tyranny of force'. The reading adopted in the text is that given by Stobaeus (flor. about 500 A.D. quotes more than 500 passages of Eur.) and is simple and consistent. τολμάν and πεφυκέναι which are variants also go well together. νικώμενον is also read for κρατούμενον.
  - 334. ούμοl—by crasis from ol έμοl.
- 335. φροῦδοι—supply είσιν, which is usually omitted in this connection. ματ. ριφθ.—' cast idly to the winds'. The tragedians prefer this fuller form to ριφέντες.
- 337, 8. 'By uttering every note which comes from the nightingale's throat'. πάσας=παντοίας. ietσα, (the ι is common). ὧστε=ως, see 179 n. [The common epithets of the nightingale, λίγεια, λιγύφωνος, flebilis, querula, illustrate the appropriateness of the comparison. Polyx. had need of a tongue like that of the much-wronged Philomela.]
- 338. μη στερ.—in prose του μη would be required: it shows very clearly the relation of cause and effect.
- 340. πρόφασιν—'a plea', often though not necessarily a false plea. πεθε—'try to persuade'. The definite act of persuading would have been expressed by aor. For appeal made on the score of children, cf. Alk. 275 (Admetus to Alk. on point of death) μη πρός παίδων οὐς όρφανεῖς.
- [342—378. Polyxena sees Odysseus showing signs of shrinking from her appeal and assures him that she is willing to follow him to death. For slavery is abominable to her, a king's daughter and once sought in marriage by princes, a rival of the gods, save in being mortal. She shrinks from menial offices or degrading alliance with a slave. If she is to die, let her die free. She urges her mother to accept the position.]
- 342. όρω σε κρύπτοντα=ότι κρύπτειs: verbs of perception usually take a participial construction not an object clause. Goodwin, § 280. δεξιάν—the right hand and beard were seized by suppliants, who were watched over and avenged by Zεθs tκέσιος.

344. yevenabos—gen. of the object aimed at. Goodwin, § 171.

345. interior A(a.—'thou hast escaped my suppliant Zeus', i.e. his vengeance [or Polyxena regards Zeus as her colleague in entreaty, identifying him with her cause].

346. ώς—'be sure that'. γε strongly emphasizes εψομα: 'not only shall I not seek to avoid but will even court death'.

347.  $\beta$ oundour the fut. with  $\epsilon l$  shows that she can still avail herself of the choice.

348. φιλόψυχος—'cowardly', cf. 315. S. John xii. 25, δ φιλών την ψυχήν αυτοῦ ἀπολέσει αυτήν.

349. The tragedians often express a negative by an interrogative. 'What call have I to live?' is equivalent to, but livelier than, 'I have no, &c.' yap—referring to a suppressed thought.

ζήν—other verbs which contract into η not a are διψάω, πεινάω, σμάω, χράω, χράω, χράομαι, and sometimes κνάω and ψάω.

μλν—answered by δέ, 354.

350. πρῶτον βίου—'this is the glory of my life'.

852. 'A bride for kings, with no mean rivalry for my nuptials, to whose hearth and home I shall come'.  $\gamma d\mu \omega \nu = \pi \epsilon \rho l$   $\gamma d\mu \omega \nu$ . Thuc. 1. 140,  $\tau \delta \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$  Me $\gamma a \rho \ell \omega \nu$   $\psi \dot{\eta} \phi \iota \sigma \mu a$ , 'the decree about the Megareans'.

858. do(counterfor more usual optative, Polyxena reverting for a moment in thought to the time when the choice still lay open to her.

δώμα έστίαν τε—almost a hendiadys, the hearth being with all Aryan nations the most sacred and central part of the δώμα. Εστία—Vesta, was the only deity common to Greeks and Romans.

354. δ'—'for'. ή δύστ.—'articulus insignis', as Bengel calls it.

"I&a-the mountain which overhung Troy: cf. 631 note.

355. The caesura in this line is not complete. ἀπόβλεπτος—'conspicuous'; so Vergil G. 3, 17, victor Tyrio conspectus (=conspiciendus) in ostro.

άπὸ denotes that men look from others to her. μέτα with dative is mainly an epic usage. Goodwin, § 191. vi. 3. Kirchhoff boldly reads παρθένων.

- 356. πλην-adverb. τὸ κατθανείν-acc. of respect.
- 357. vôv 8'-' but as things are'. rovvoua-'the name (of slave) by its strangeness makes me in love with death'.
- 358. εἰωθὸς ὄν—such a combination of two participles is rare: of. Hom. Il. 19. 80, ἐπιστάμενόν περ' ἐόντα. Aristoph. Frogs 721, οὐτε γὰρ τούτοισιν οὖσιν οὖ κεκιβδηλευμένοις.
- 359. äν...äν—the repetition of äν is emphatic. Soph. Ant. 69 (Antigone is indignantly refusing her sister's aid), σοῦτ' ἄν κελεύσαιμ' οῦτ' ἄν εἰ θέλοις ἔτι | πράσσειν, ἐμοῦ γ' ἄν ἡδέως δρώης μέτα.
- ώμῶν φρένας—'of savage heart', acc. of specification, Goodwin, § 160.
- 360. δεσποτών δοτις—a like combination of sing. and pl. occurs Med. 220, βροτών | δοτις στυγεί. ἀνήσεται—cf. ἀφίξομαι, 352 note. dργύρου—gen. of price, Goodwin, § 178.
- 362. 'Imposing upon me the harsh service of making bread at home and of sweeping the house and standing over the loom, harshly will he use me'.  $\kappa\epsilon\rho\kappa(s)$ —in the  $l\sigma\tau\delta s$  or upright loom is the 'rod' or in later times 'comb' by which the threads of the woof were driven home so as to make the web even and close. It is probably derived from  $\kappa\rho\epsilon\kappa\omega$  (an onomatopoetic word='to strike') and was probably held in the hands.  $\sigma\alpha\epsilon\rho\epsilon\nu$ —including all menial offices.  $[\sigma\epsilon\sigma\eta\rho\alpha]$  and tenses formed from it mean 'to snarl', 'to sneer'.]

έφεστάναι—similar short forms of the perf. inf. used by Attic writers are τεθνάναι, βεβάναι, τετλάναι, δεδειπνάναι, ήριστάναι. λυπρός and λυπηρός are collateral but distinct forms: it must not be thought that one is a contracted form of the other. ἀναγκάσει—following so soon after ἀνάγκην is to us ill-sounding, but cf. e.g. 223, ἐπιστάτης, ἐπέσται.

366.  $\tau\nu\rho\Delta\nu\nu\nu\nu$  if.—'deemed worthy of princes'. [The Greek  $\tau\nu\rho\alpha\nu\nu\nu$ s (Doric form of  $\kappa\epsilon\ell\rho\alpha\nu\nu$ s, a ruler) might or might not be 'a tyrant', being a despot who had gained his power by force or fraud, whether he exercised it ill or well. The early tyrants did as a rule govern well, but the words of the Corinthians at Sparta (n.c. 509), when dissuading the Spartans from replacing Hippias in Athens by force, show the hateful excesses into which they might fall, Hdt. 5. 92.]

- 367. et Sŷra—'no indeed', ôŷra strongly emphasizing the word after which it stands; cf.  $\tau l$  ôŷra;  $\tau \omega s$  ôŷra; how pray? cf. notes on 247, 623.  $\phi \epsilon \gamma \psi \sigma = G$  freek loved the light, and all dying addresses (e.g. those of Ajax, and Alkestis, and Dido, Vergil Aeneid 4 copied from the Ajax) bid a loving farewell to the sun and his light. Assocow—freedom was a passion with the Greek. We should have expected  $\epsilon \lambda \epsilon \nu \theta \epsilon \rho \omega r$ ; but it is one of the many instances of transferred epithets.
- 369. ἀγ' οὖν μ'.—Porson's correction after an old commentator for ἀγου μ'. ἄγων—the present participle is rather loosely used.
- 370. And is distinguished from 86 as being better grounded. Plato contrasts  $\delta\delta\xi a$  mere 'opinion' or 'seeming' with  $\ell\pi\iota\sigma\tau\dot{\eta}\mu\eta$ , 'certain knowledge'.  $\tau\sigma\nu=\tau\nu\sigma$ s is contracted from the Ionian form  $\tau\epsilon\sigma$  found in Homer, and is only found in Attic. It is similarly placed Aesch. Prom. 21, Iv' obre  $\phi\omega\nu\dot{\eta}\nu$  obre  $\tau\sigma\nu$   $\mu\rho\rho\phi\dot{\eta}\nu$   $\beta\rho\sigma\tau\dot{\omega}\nu$  |  $\delta\psi\epsilon$ t.
- 372. μῆτφ, σè δ'—in suddenly addressing a new person first comes the vocative, then the pronoun, then the particle. 1287. Έκάβη σὺ δ' ὧ κ.τ.λ.
- 373. λέγουσα μήτε δρώσα—'neither by word nor act', supply μήτε before λέγουσα. [Some MSS. and editors read μηδέ, but λ. μηδὲ δρώσα='saying but not doing'.] συμβούλου, 'join in wishing for my death'. Beware of confusing βούλομαι and its compounds with βουλεύω.
  - 374. θανείν—substantive, object of συμβούλου.
- 375. Stobaeus quoting this passage reads πόνων, 378 έν κακοίς, 380 πλείστον.
- 377. μάλλον εύτυχέστερος—double comparatives are occasionally met with. Eur. Hippolytus 485, μάλλον άλγίων, Soph. Antig. 1210, μάλλον άσσον, Shakespeare, Tempest, 1. 2, 'more better'.
- 378. Nauck suspects this verse, perhaps with reason. On the one hand it is just such a verse as copyists would insert, on the other hand Euripides often ends with such saws.
- μή καλώς—'if with dishonour', μή adding a hypothetic touch.

379. 'Marvellous and notable among men is the stamp of noble birth and rises to higher repute of nobility'.

χαρακτήρ—a metaphor from the stamping of money. Milton (with whom Euripides was a great favourite) may have borrowed hence, 'Reason's mintage | charactered in the face'. ἐσθλῶν—gen. of origin, Soph. Ant. 38, εἰτ' εὐγενὴς πέψυκας εἰτ' ἐσθλῶν κακή. Euripides had a high opinion of the value of good birth, but it must be accompanied by nobility of nature. κἀπὶ μείζον ἔρχεται—Soph. Phil. 258, ἡ δ' ἐμὴ νόσος | ἀεὶ τέθηλε κἀπὶ μείζον ἔρχεται. ὅνομα, acc., the nom. would require τοῦνομα in strict Greek.

- [382. Hecuba. Let me be substituted for Polyxena; I am the mother of that Paris who slew Achilles. Odysseus. Nay it is Polyxena whom Achilles demands. Hecuba. Let us die together: nothing shall avail to separate us, I will cling to her as ivy to the oak.]
- 382. εἶπαε—the quick Greek uses the acrist in order to revert to the precise moment, so ἀπέπτυσα I loathe, ἐπήνεσα I praise, ἐδεξάμην I accept.
  - 383. 'But to that good is added pain'.
- $\tau \hat{\varphi}$  II $\eta \lambda \ell \omega s$ —a spondaic caesura is allowable in the fifth foot when the first part of it is a monosyllable capable of beginning a sentence, or the second part a monosyllable incapable of beginning one.
  - 884. ψόγον—'the blame' of not honouring the brave.
- 386. ἄγοντες—cf. ἄγων, 369 note. ήμᾶς—'me only'. Cf. 237 note.
- 391. ἀλλά—' at any rate'. This use of άλλά is due to an ellipse, ὑμεῖς δὲ, εἰ μὴ μόνην με βούλεσθε φονεῦσαι, ἀλλὰ θυγατρὶ συμφονεύσατε.
- 392. Eur. Troades 381, οὐδὲ πρὸς τάφους  $\uparrow$  ἔσθ' ὅστις αὐτοῖτ αἴμα  $\gamma \hat{y}$  δωρήσεται. The earth is endowed with life and sense.
- πώμα—the correction of Porson for πόμα of MSS., this not being an Attic form.
- 394. είς, the reading of the best MS., is better than σης of most editors. 'We must not add one death to another, would that the obligation even of this death were spared us'. μηδε (not οὐδέ) is used because ώφειλομεν expresses an unattainable wish. The aorist is more usual than the imperfect, and often in the form είθ' ώφειλον. Supply προσφέρειν from προσουστέος.

- 396. γε (condemned by Hermann) is forcible.
- 397. 'How? for I am not aware that I have masters'. κεκτημένος—this participle (nom. because it refers to the subject of the clause) is the regular construction after οίδα and ἐπίσταμαι. Cf. 244 note. δεσπότας—for the strong sense of this word of. Hippol. 88, where the attendant calls Hippolytus ἄναξ, adding θεούς γὰρ δεσπότας καλεῖν χρεών, 'for the gods alone may I style lords'.
- 398. If one could go so far as to declare the verse corrupted by the intrusion of a gloss  $\tau \hat{\eta} \sigma \delta \epsilon$ , the line might be re-written thus:  $-\delta \pi \omega \epsilon$ ;  $\delta \pi o \delta a$  ki  $\sigma o \delta \epsilon$   $\xi \epsilon \rho u a \delta \rho u \delta \epsilon$ . Dost ask how? like ivy to an oak will I cling. The  $\tau \hat{\eta} \sigma \delta \epsilon$  would be manifestly understood from  $\theta u \gamma \alpha \tau \rho t$  in 396. [This is Dr Kennedy's view. Other ways of taking the passage are (1) 'Know that I will cling to her as ivy to an oak', supplying before  $\delta \pi \omega \epsilon$  some such word as  $l \sigma \theta \iota$ . (2) A double comparison may be intended, 'I, like ivy, will cling to her as to an oak'.]  $\delta \rho u \delta \omega = 0$ . 64 note.
- 399. oök—'No!' Thus emphatically used accented.  $\eta\nu$  ye—'that is, if'. [Aldus reads où  $\mu\eta\nu$  ye, but où  $\mu\eta\nu$  is never immediately followed by  $\gamma\epsilon$ .]
- 400. &s—'know that'=lσθι ωs. Soph. Aj. 39, ωs ἐστω ἀνδρὸς τοῦδε τάργα ταῦτα σοι, 'know that in him thou hast the doer of these deeds'. The phrase is a formula 'fortiter affirmantis' (Elmsley).
- 401. ού μην—formula of emphatic denial. αὐτοῦ—gen, of place.
- [402—443. Polyx. 'Mother resist not, it is unseemly'. Polyxena exchanges a tearful farewell with her mother and is led off with veiled head by Odysseus.]
- 402. Λαερτίου—the name of Lacrtius (father of Odysseus and king of Ithaca) is variously spelt by the tragedians Λαέρτιος, Λάρτιος, Λαέρτης.
- 403. χάλα—'give way to'. τοκεῦσιν—vague plural alluding to Heouba, as 404 κρατοῦσι to Odysseus. This plural is often used instead of a definite name which it might be inconvenient to give.
- 406. πρός βίαν—'with violence', so πρός ήδουήν, 'willingly'; πρός χάρω, 'pleasingly'; πρός τάχος, 'quickly'.
  - 407. de-'by'.
  - 408. πείσει-future from πάσχω. The form πείση is not rightly read in Euripides. μη σύ γ'—a formula of fond entreaty. Supply from the context some such words as οὖτω ποίησον.

- 410. προσβαλείν—object of δόs.
- 411. Soph. Aj. 857, και τον διφρευτήν ήλιον προσεννέπω, | πανύστατον δή κούποτ' αὐθις ὕστερον (Ajax's dying speech).
- 413. δη strengthens τέλος (as πανύστατον in the passage from the Ajax). Cf. Eur. Herakl. 573, προσειποῦσ' ὖστατον πρόσφθεγμα δή.
- 414. ἄπειμι—often used as an euphemism for dying: so οίχομαι.
  - 415. ήμεις—'I', as in 386.
  - 416. ων-supply υμεναίων from ανυμέναιος.
- 418. ἐκα—a constant euphemism for ἐν "Αιδου (sc. δόμοις), which here occurs by its side, κείσομαι—especially of lying among the dead. There is some confusion between the body lying in the dead and the spirit in Hades,
- 419. ποι τελευτήσω—'to what end shall I bring my life?' This construction is called pregnant='whither shall I (carry and) end my life?' Cf. Troad. 1029, to' είδ ŷs οι τελευτήσω λόγον.
- 420. πατρός οὖσα—gen. of origin, which is taken by εἰμί, γίγνομαι, απα πέφυκα. Cf. 380 note.
- 421. According to Homer these 50 children were those of Priam, 19 (or 38) of them by Hecuba. Verg. Aen. 2.503, quinquaginta illi thalami spes tanta nepotum. αμμοροί τ.—'bereft of', gen. of separation. [The old reading was ἡμεῖτ δὲ πεντήκοντ' ἀμοιροί δὴ τέκνων, a verse which Eur. cannot have written. Cf. 383 n.]
- 422. co.—ethic dative. Hektor—his eldest son. debet deliberative conjunctive. Goodwin, § 256.
- 425. d $\theta\lambda$ (a.—This is Markland's suggestion for  $d\theta\lambda$ (as. Two epithets for  $\tau i \chi \eta s$  would be very awkward, and the whole sentence would be jerky and uncomfortable.
  - 426. For position of re cf. 80 n.
- 427. χαίρουσιν—'others fare well, but this is not thy mother's lot'. Polyxena had said 'farewell', and Hecuba plays upon the words. The same pun is found in Sophokles, Euripides, Plautus, &c. ξστιν—emphatic, and so accented. τόδε—so. τὸ χαίρεω. Τhe variant χαρά is clearly an explanatory gloss.

430. Cavoforns...σον-θαν. agrees with σου supplied from σον. Cf. Ov. Her. 5. 45, et flesti et nostros vidisti flentis ocellos.

δμμα συγκλήειν—'to shut the eyes', i.e. attend to her at her death. Verg. Aen. 9. 487, nec te tua funera mater | produxi, pressive oculos, aut volnera lavi. [The form -κλήειν is more Attic than -κλείειν of old editions.]

432. ἀμφιθείς κάρα πέπλοις virtually form one word, hence follows the accusative με.

433. ἐκτέτηκα—Contrast this intransitive usage of the 2nd (or strong) perfect with the transitive meaning of ἐκτήκω 434. So ἔαγα= 'I am broken', from ἄγννμ, 'I break'; δλωλα 'I am destroyed', from δλνμ, 'I destroy'. καρδίαν—acc. of respect or specification. Goodwin, § 160. 1.

435. 'O light! for I may yet invoke thy name, but have no share of thee save for so long as I pass hence to the sword and pyre of Achilles'. [ŏνομα—a plausible suggestion  $\delta\mu\mu\alpha$  has been made, but  $\delta\nu\rho\mu\alpha$  is more appropriate, implying that although Polyxens could invoke the name, she could not enjoy the reality.]

488. προλείπω 'I faint'. Cf. Alk. 401, τί δρᾶς; προλείπω. λύεται are failing me'. Herakl. 602, ὡ παίδες, οἰχόμεσθα, λύεται μέλη | λύπη. In Attic, λῦω, ἐλῦον, λῦσω, ἔλῦσα: but λέλῦκα.

441—448. These verses are spurious. For they cannot be spoken by Hecuba, who has fainted; they are more than awkward as beginning a stasimon; they are in themselves feeble.

&s-'in this plight', i.e. a slave. [&s would = utinam.]

Διοσκόροι — Castor and Pollux were born at a birth with Helen. The form διόσκουροι (whence Latin Dioscuri) is not Attic.

'Ελένην—There is a play on this word and είλε 443 (which = καθείλε); cf. αἰνόπαρω 945.

[444—483. First Stammon,  $\sigma \tau \acute{a} \sigma \iota \mu o \tau$  ( $\mu \acute{e} \lambda o s$ ), or ode by the entire chorus after taking up their position at the thymele. The term itself appears to involve two notions—that of the chorus in position at the thymele—and that of an ode unbroken by dialogue or anapaests. Cho. 'Ocean breeze, to whose house wilt thou waft me a slave? To Doris, or Phthia, or Delos, or Athens? My city smoulders in ruins, I am a slave'.

- 444. ποντιάs—adjectives in -ds are usually (but not of necessity) joined with fem. words. Phoen. 1025, φοιτάσι πτεροΐς.
  - 445. ποντοπόρους, θods—fixed Epic epithets.
- 446. dκάτους—an exclusively poetical word, the usual prose equivalent being καῦς, and ἀκάτιον is a mere skiff.
  - 447. πορεύω-'I make to go', πορεύομαι-'I go'.
  - 448. τφ; = τίνι; κτηθώσα—rarely used passive as here.
  - 450. Aupls ala-the Peloponnese.
  - 451. Phthia-in Thessaly.
- 453. ὑδάτων πατέρα—So Eur. Med. 573 praises the Haliakmon.
- 454. Apidanus—a tributary of the Peneus, and one of the few rivers, says Herodotus 7. 196, which Xerxes did not drink dry. γύας—restored by Hermann for the gloss πέδια.
  - 455. νάσων—connected with ποί, 447.
  - 456. πεμπομέναν—governed by πορεύσεις, 447.
- 458. The palm is said to have been first born at Delos, because it gained its eminence among trees from its connection with Apollo who was there born. Stor is often used of things glorious [from same root as dies, divus, &c.], but the epithet here alludes probably to the fact that Latona's travail brought forth gods, viz. Apollo and Artemis [or that they were the children of Zeus]. Delos was in Olympiad 88. 3 (B.C. 426, cf. Thuc. 3, 104) solemnly purified by the Athenians. Plutarch tells us that Nikias, the Athenian general, took pains to make this celebration a success by providing splendid chorus and uniting Delos to the islet of Rheneia. [This is one of the contemporary allusions which help to fix the date of the play.]
- 465. ἀμπυξ—'a head-band', so called because it ἀμπέχει (surrounds) the hair.
  - 466. Παλλάδος πόλις-Athens.
- 467. θεᾶς valovo'—Nauck's emendation for the unmetrical *Αθαναίας.
- καλλιδίφρου—Athene is represented in her chariot fighting against the Titans. Compounds of καλ- are formed from the subst. κάλλος, not the adj. καλός. [Porson reads καλλιδίφρω', but the elision is impossible.]
- 468. πέπλος—the sacred vestment of Athene on which was depicted the goddess doing battle with the giants. It was carried in solemn procession at the greater Panathenaea once every Olympiad,

- 470. SaiSakenton—used by Homer of stone or metal working, but here referring clearly to embroidery. 'Shall I yoke?' of course means 'shall I represent by embroidery the yoking of the steeds?'
- 471: ἀνθόκροκος—perhaps merely variegated (ἄνθος) and safiron-coloured (κρόκος). πήνη—'thread', pl. 'the web', Latin tela. From the same root comes the Latin pannus, a patch,
- 472. Titans—the sons of Ouranos and Gaia, who rebelled against Zeus after he had conquered them and Kronos their king. Later poets add largely to their numbers, Aeschylus including Prometheus, while in the Latin poets Titan = the sunged.
- 473. τὰν=ῆν. ἀμφιπύρφ—used by Sophokles of Artemis holding torches in both hands.
  - 475. TEKEWY-Goodwin, § 173. 3.
  - 478. Sopiktytos 'Apystov-a possessive genitive.
- 480. κέκλημαι—more forcible than είμι, which it often means. A Greek hated the name as much as the reality of slavery. Cf. 552.
- 482. See the translation of the entire ode. The old translation was 'having left Asia the handmaid of Europe, having by exchange become the bride of Hades' (which of course was absurd, as they had not to die): or 'having changed death's chambers (for slavery)', which is harsh. But the fatal objection brought forward by Hartung is that Eur. often uses  $\theta\ell\rho\alpha\pi\nu\alpha$  in the sense of 'a habitation', never in that of 'a handmaid', which would be  $\theta\rho\alpha\pi\nu\mu\alpha$ .
- "Breeze, ocean breeze, that carriest swift sea-bound barques o'er the swelling flood, whither wilt thou waft me the forlorn one? To whose house gotten for a slave shall I come? Shall it be to a harbour in the land of Doris, or of Phthia, where they say that Apidanus, father of fairest waters, fattens the furrows? Or to what isle wilt thou bring me, hapless one, sped by the sea-sweeping oar, spending a piteous life in the house,—to that one where the palm there first created and the bay tree raised their sacred shoots for dear Leto, to grace her divine travail? And shall I praise with Delian maidens the golden fillet and bow of Artemis? Or shall I, dwelling in the city of Pallas of the fair chariot, yoke young steeds on her saftron roles, exp.

broidering them on the rich wrought flower-decked web, or [embroidering] the race of the Titans which Zeus, Kronos' son, with flashing flame hushes to rest? Woe is me for my children, for my fathers, for my country, which, smoke-defiled, lies in ruin won by the Argives' spear. And I in a strange land am called a slave, having left Asia and taken in exchange an abode in Europe (which is to me) the bridal-chamber of Hades."

- [484-517. Enter Talthybius. Is there a god in heaven, or does chance rule all? Yonder lies one erewhile a queen, now a wretched slave. Lady, arise. Hecuba. Who art thou? T. I am Talthybius, sent by Agamemnon for thee. H. What? Am I too to die? Blessed news! T. Nay, thou art to bury thy daughter. H. Tell me how ye did the cruel deed.]
- 484. Sn wore (to be written separately)—'lately'. But Pflugk prefers to give  $\delta \dot{\eta}$  the sense which it has with superlatives.
- 485. ἐξτύροιμι ἄν—a modified future, a tense avoided by the Greeks where possible, an example of their softening down.
- 486. νῶτ' Κουσα.—Hecuba is lying huddled up. The position has been objected to as undignified, but it is for this very reason that Euripides introduces it to heighten the pity of the audience.
- 488. 'Zeus, what am I to say? that thou regardest men or that they have idly and to no purpose this false opinion, thinking that there is a race of gods, whereas chance watches over all things among mortals'. The change of subject is harsh, that of δρῶν being σϵ, that of κεκτῆσθα being ἀνθρῶντουν. ἀλλως μ. ψ.—This piling up of the agony is quite in the tragic vein, and v. 490, condemned by several editors, appears quite genuine. δοκοῦντας—epexegetic of τήνδε δόξαν. Euripides was a pupil of the great philosopher Anaxagoras and averse to popular mythology, but Aristophanes' strictures on him are unjust.
  - 492. ÿ8€—pointing at her.
- 494. πάσ' ἀνέστηκεν—'is utterly destroyed'. The position of πάσα shows that it closely qualifies ἀνέστηκεν. [Remember that the present, imperfect, future and 1st acrist of Ιστημι and its compounds are transitive, the rest intransitive.]
  - 495. αὐτή—'and she', the correction of Elmsley for αΰτη.

- 496. κεται—'is grovelling', the word used of Achilles in his rage and grief after the taking away of Briseis (IL. 2. 688), of Ajax when he recovered his senses and realised his shame (Soph. Aj. 206). κόνει φόρ.—lit. 'caking with dust her head', always a sign of mourning. Cf. Catullus 64. 224, canitiem terra atque infuso pulvere foedans.
- 497. Talthybius means 'I have but little life left to enjoy, (this little being on that account the more precious,) but I would surrender that'. &c.
  - 498. περιπίπτω—usually of 'coming across' a disaster.
- 500. παλ-λευκον—a favourite compound with Euripides, e.g. 196, 212, 411, 528, 657, 667.
- 501. τίς οὖτος οἰκ ἐῷς—Hecuba, looking up for the first time, 'Who art thou that sufferest me not, &c.?' For construction cf. Hom. Il. 10. 82, τίς δ' οὖτος κατὰ νῆας ἀνὰ στράτον ἔρχεαι οὖος; σῶμα τοὑμὸν—a periphrasis for ἐμέ.
  - 502. He ought to have respected her grief.
- 503. Δαναϊδών—Peoples are often designated by patronymics, so Dardanidae, Aeneadae.
- 504. πέμψαντος—supply έμέ. μέτα—i.e. μεταπέμψαντος. This cutting words as under is called tmesis.
- 506. δεκοῦν—'because it is decided', acc. abs. Cf. 121 n. We should have expected the acrist δόξαν: cf. ἄγων, 369 note.
- 507. eyκονέω—said to be connected with κόνις='raise dust by bustling'. ήγοῦ μοι—cf. 383 note.
- 509.  $\mu$ eracrefxev—'seeking for thee', not 'to seek for thee', which would be future. For the force of  $\mu$ erá in composition cf. 213 note.
- 510. 'Ατραίδα...the two sons of Atreus, Agamemnon king of Mykenae, and Menelaüs king of Sparta. λ. 'Αχαιϊκός....a democratic anachronism. In those early times the people would have little voice in the matter.
- 511.  $\tau$   $\lambda$ éfas;—'what art thou about to say?' Hecuba fears still worse remains to hear, it is incorrect therefore to say that it= $\tau i \lambda \epsilon \gamma e i s$ ;
- dpa—'it would seem', the lightest of the inferential particles. So θανουμένους—'for death'. So with the future participle gives the avowed cause whether really meant or not.

- 514.  $\tau \delta$  that  $\sigma \epsilon$ —'with regard to thee' (Polyxena). Many editors have considered that  $\sigma' = \sigma \sigma l$ , which however never suffers elision, and would give a wrong sense, 'as far as depends upon thee'.
- justs—cf. 386 note. Notice how she becomes singular and feminine at the same time.
- 515.  $\pi\hat{\omega}_s$   $\kappa\alpha l$ ;—'how in fact?' (1)  $\tau ls$  ( $\pi\hat{\omega}_s$ ,  $\pi\hat{\omega}_s$ ),  $\kappa\alpha l$  asks for real information, the  $\kappa\alpha l$  adding vigour= $\tau ls$   $\delta\eta$ . Cf. 1064. (2)  $\kappa\alpha l$   $\tau ls$  ( $\pi\hat{\omega}_s$ ,  $\pi\hat{\omega}_s$ ,  $\pi\hat{\omega}_s$ s,  $\pi\hat{\omega}_s$ s) is a formula of contradiction, the question being a sneering one.  $\nu\nu\nu=\alpha\nu\tau\eta\nu$ .  $\mu\nu$ , a corresponding dialectical form, is not found in tragedy. 'How in fact did ye despatch her? with reverence, or came ye to the dread deed butchering her as a foe?'
- [518-582. Talthybius. All the Greek host were in attendance. Neoptolemus set the maid on the tomb, poured a libation, and prayed for a safe return. The maiden at her prayer was unhanded that she a princess might die free: then tearing open her dress she bade Neoptolemus strike where he would. The blow fell; and scarce had she fallen when all vied to do her honour in collecting wood for the pyre or leaves to cover her withal, each urging his neighbour to activity in the work.]
- 518. 'Lady, thou wouldst have me take a double meed of tears in pity for thy daughter: for now in relating the evil tale shall I moisten this eye even as at the tomb when she was dying'. After  $\pi\rho\delta s$   $\tau d\phi \omega$   $\tau \epsilon$  supply  $\ell \tau \epsilon \gamma \ell a$ . Characteristics when the tense.
  - 521. πας...πλήρης—emphatic repetition, cf. 489 note.
- 522. (n) opayds—'for the slaying of the maiden'. (nith acc.) denoting the direction of their attention.
  - 523. xepòs—' by the hand'. Goodwin, § 171.
- 524. ἔστησε—' set her'. ἐπ' ἄκρ. χωμ.—This was necessary: cf. Helen's directions to Elektra, Or. 116, καὶ στᾶσ' ἐπ' ἄκρου χώματος λέξον τάδε. πέλας δ' ἐγὼ—sc. ἔστην.
- 525. 'And picked young men chosen from the Achaeans attended in order to restrain with their hands thy maiden's struggling'. λεκτοί and εκκριτοι together are awkward. μόσ-χου—cf. 144.
- 528. alpet—'raises on high'. [This is the reading of the best MS. and one other. All the rest read έρρει, but apart from the fact that the time for pouring the libation has not yet come,  $\delta \epsilon \hat{\nu} \times \chi c \delta s$ , 'to pour libations', is not Greek. A river might well enough be said  $\delta \epsilon \hat{\nu} \times \gamma \delta \lambda a$ , 'to flow with milk', but to say that a man 'flows libations' is quite another thing.]

529. σημαίνα—' signifies', by a sign, in order to avoid ill-omened words which might mar the whole sacrifice: of. εύφημα φωνεῦν = silere.

531. παραστάς—'having stood forth', Aristoph. Knights, 508, πρὸς τὸ θέατρον παραβῆναι. σίγα—adv. σίγα—imper. of σιγάω.

533. νήνεμον—' And I hushed the crowd into quiet', proleptic. The derivation is νή, ἄνεμος, cf. νώνυμος = νή, ὄνομα.

534. **arrip*—nominative for vocative as usual in oxytone words.

537. dκραιφνές—' virgin', lit. 'undefiled', in sense qualifying κόρης. Cf. Iph. Aul. 1574, άχραντον αξμα καλλιπαρθένου δέρης.

538. 'Show thyself kindly to us'.

539. λθσαι—object of δός. Note the change of construction, after δὸς ἡμῶν comes an accusative and infinitive clause.

χαλινωτήρια—sc. ὅπλα, metaphor from horses, would in prose be πρυμνήσια. As soon as a breeze sprang up these ropes from stern to shore would be cut. πρύμνας κ. χαλ.—a kind of hendiadys.

541. vóorou—from which Achilles' anger had debarred them, 113.

542. ἐπ-ηύξατο—' prayed after him ', so ἐπ-άδειν.

543. 'Then by its handle he seized a knife gilt all over and was in act to draw it forth from its sheath'. κώπης—523 n.

546.  $\epsilon \phi \rho d \sigma \theta \eta$ —'she noted it', passive in form, but  $= \epsilon \phi \rho d \sigma a \tau o$ .

547. 'You have destroyed my city, at least let me die free'.

552. κεκλήσθαι αΙσχύνομαι—The infinitive is used when a feeling of shame prevents a person from acting, the participle when that which a person does causes him shame. So αΙσχύνομαι λέγειν, 'I am ashamed to speak and so do not'; αΙσχύνομαι λέγων,' I speak but am ashamed of it'.

- 553. (***epoblyouv—a metaphor from the grating of the shingle on the beach when the sea is strong.
- [555, 6. ol δ' ως... ήν κράτος—probably an interpolation based upon the Homeric σου κράτος έστι μέγιστον, being tame, and οδτερ misplaced.]
- 558. 'She seized her robes and rent them from the top of the shoulder to the middle of the waist by the navel'.
- 560. Every man in the audience could recall some exquisite statue. The comparison was frequent. Plato Charmid. 154 c, ἀλλὰ πάντες ὤσπερ ἄγαλμα ἐθεῶντο αὐτόν. Aesch. Ag. 242, πρέπουσα ὡς ἐν γραφαῖς.
- 562. τλημονέστατον—'bravest'. According to their context, words from root ΤΛΑ have an active or passive meaning.
- 564. παίσον—'strike now'. More emphatic than παῖε would have been.
  - 564. avxiv-'neck'.
  - 565. hasude-'throat', 'gullet'.
- 566. Cf. Shakespeare, Measure for Measure, Act 2, Sc. 1, 'at war 'twixt will and will not'.
- 567. 'Cuts with his steel the channels of her breath', i.e. her windpipe, Southey's 'the tube which draws the breath of life'.
- 568. Kpouvol—sc. alµaros. Kal 6v. 5µws—a strong expression; such thoughts would not be expected in death.
- 569. εδοχήμως—ἄπαξ λεγ. formed from εδοχημος. Cf. Ovid, Fasti 2. 833, tum quoque iam moriens ne non procumbat honeste | respicit: haec etiam cura cadentis erat.
- 570. Cobet objects to the line as marring the grace of the passage. It is however copied by Ovid, M. 13. 479, tum quoque cura fuit partes velare tegendas, | cum caderet, castique decus servare pudoris.
  - крбитау takes two accusatives, Goodwin, § 164.
- 571. ἀφῆκε πν.—'had given up the ghost', the Greek idiom takes the acrist where we prefer the pluperfect.
- 574. φύλλοις  $\xi\beta$ .—'covered with leaves'. φυλλοβολία, decking with leaves, whether in life for having won in the games, or after death in token of love or respect. •ἱ δὲ  $\pi\lambda$ .— 'while others heap up the funeral pile, bringing pine logs'. κορμός—ahort, thick  $\log [\kappa\epsilon i \rho \omega, ' \log ']$ .

- 576. τοίαδ' ἤκουεν κακά—'was addressed with such reproaches as these'. Cf. Alk. 704, εἰ δ' ἡμᾶς κακῶς | ἐρεῖς, ἀκούσει τολλὰ κού ψευδῆ κακά. Hor. Sat. 2. 6. 20, matutine pater, seu Iane libentior audis.
- 578. Thuc. 3. 58 (speech of the Plataeans). 'Look at the sepulchres of your fathers, whom slain by Medes and buried in our land, we were wont yearly to honour at the public expense with garments and all other due rites'. Verg. Aen. 6. 221, purpureasque super vestes, velamina nota, | coniciunt.
- 579. εl—from είμι, ibo. περισσά—neut. pl. used adverbially.
- 580. λέγω is Heath's correction of the MS, readings λέγον or λέγων, from which no satisfactory meaning can be got.
- [583-628. Cho. There is a doom of the gods against the house of Priam. Hecuba. Daughter, thy nobleness softens my sorrow at thy fate. Is virtue inborn or can it be taught? Bid the Greeks not touch my daughter's corpse. Aged handmaid, go to the sea to fetch some lustral water, I will go to the tents to see if there be aught to honour the dead withal.]
- 583. ἐπέξεσε—'hath surged up against'. English has to change both tense and metaphor, as we do not speak of evil boiling over against us. Πριαμίδαις—'the house of Priam'; patronymics are often loosely used.
- 584. dvayκαίον θεών— 'a doom of the gods'. Cf. Soph. 4j. 485, της άναγκαίας τύχης, 'the fate-doomed lot.' Il. 16, 836, ημαρ άναγκαίον, 'the day of doom'.
  - 586. ἄψωμαι—' touch upon'.
- 587. παρακαλά—'calls me aside', a frequent meaning of παρὰ in composition.
- 588. διάδοχος κ. κ.—' adding new in succession to former evils'. Suppl. 71, αγών δδ' άλλος έρχεται γύων γύοις | διάδοχος.
- 589. 'And now I could not wipe out thy fate from my heart so far as not to lament it'. The order is rather inverted.
- 591.  $\tau \delta \lambda (a\nu \epsilon x \cos s)$ , i.e. of grief. It is worthy of note how the Greeks utilised their neuter; here supply  $\sigma \tau \epsilon \nu \epsilon \nu \nu$  from the context.
- 592. 'Is it not then strange that poor soil if it meet with a good season at the hand of the gods brings forth core abundantly, and fruitful soil, should it miss what it ought to have met with, gives a poor crop; while in men at all times the corrupt is nothing but bad, and the noble noble, nor through mishap does he spoil his nature, but is ever excellent?

- 595. ἀνθρώποις— 'as regards men', usually ἐν ἀνθρώποις. [Some editors read ἐν βροτοῖς by conjecture.]
- 598. διέφθειρε—Gnomic aorist used to express a habit. Cf. Eur. Suppl. 227, δ θεδι-διώδιεσεν, 'is wont to destroy'. Hor. Od. 1. 34, Fortuna sustulit. Goodwin, § 205. [Here as elsewhere, Eur. sins against good taste in putting a rhetorical harangue on the subject εἰ διδακτὸν ἡ ἀρετή (a question discussed in the Meno of Plato, the decision being that it could if there were competent teachers) into the mouth of a mother mourning over the loss of her daughter.]
- 599. 'Is it the parents who make the difference or the bringing up?' The article before  $\tau \epsilon \kappa \delta \nu \tau \epsilon \epsilon$  does duty also for  $\tau \rho \epsilon \phi a \ell$ . [Or 'have the parents more weight than' &c. The construction  $\delta \iota a \phi \epsilon \rho \omega \eta$  is found.]
- 600. 'Yet even to have been well brought up involves teaching of good'.  $\gamma \epsilon \mu \epsilon \nu \tau \sigma \iota$  often come together in Sophokles and Euripides,  $\gamma \epsilon \tau \sigma \iota$   $\tau \iota$  (of some editions) never.
- 602. κανόνι τοῦ καλοῦ—'a standard of right'. μαθών—'having learnt it'. [Porson suggests μετρῶν, 'estimating it', which appears unnecessary.]
  - $603. \;\;$  i.e. 'these things will bring me no surcease of sorrow'.
- 604. 5'—spoken to Talthybius; 'take to the A. this message, that they'.
- 605. μοι—Ethic dative, G. § 184. 3, note 2. ετργειν—
  'shut out', είργειν, 'shut in', acc. to Eustathius [fl. A.D. 1150] followed by Lobeck, &c. Others, however, e.g. Bekker, always read είργειν in Attic.
- 606. τῆς παιδὸς—gen, of separation after εἰργεω. G. § 174.
- τοι—the usual particle in gnomes and so preferable to γλρ, which has also less MS. authority. μυρίφ—'countless', akin to Lat. multus.
- 607. 'The lawlessness of the sailors blazes fiercer than fire'. Euripides gives a side-blow at democracy which was intimately connected with the sea. Aristotle talks of the καυτικός δχλος as the scum of the population, Pol. 7. 5. κρείσσων

- -cf. Soph. Oed. Tyr. 176, κρεῖσσον ἀμαιμακέτου πυρός, 'more quick than furious fire'.
- 608. μή—not où, because it supplies a reason, qui non faciat.
  - 610. ποντίας άλὸς—'some salt sea water', partitive gen.
- 611. After death an obol (about three-halfpence) was put in the mouth as ferry money for Charon; then the body was washed, anointed and dressed in a fine robe by the female attendants.
- 612. Polyxena was betrothed to Achilles and so not a παρθένος: but not a bride, and so ἀνυμφος. There is probably a side reference of betrothal to Hades. [This placing side by side of opposite words is called oxymōron: cf. Tennyson, 'His honour rooted in dishonour stood, and faith unfaithful kept him falsely true'.]
- 613. προθώμαι—'lay out'. When decorated (611 n.) the corpse was laid out on a bed, often out of doors, the object of this formal πρόθεσις being to make sure that there had been no foul play and that death had really taken place. After the body had lain there for a day (i.e. 48 hours after death) burial took place.
- 'According to her deserts how can I? I cannot; but (so will I do it) as I am able'. She will consult not her wishes but her means.
- 614.  $\tau l$  yàp  $\pi d\theta \omega$ ;—'what must I content myself with?' differs from  $\tau l$  yàp  $\delta p\hat{\omega}$  in containing an idea of circumstances out of her control.
  - 615. κόσμον—'decorations'.
  - 616. ξσω-'within', a sense usually borne by εντός.
- 617. τ. νεωστὶ δεσπότας—'our lately acquired masters'. For ·τι cf. μεγαλωστί, ονομαστί. Goodwin, § 129. 18.
- 618. κλίμμα—a curious word for Hecuba to use, even though all they had belonged to their masters. Nauck suggests  $\lambda \epsilon \hat{\iota} \mu \mu a$ , 'remnant', or  $\kappa \tau \hat{\eta} \mu a$ , 'possession'.
- 619. ἀ σχήματ' οίκων—'O stately halls'. The same periphrasis occurs Alk. 911.
- 620. 'O Priam, possessor of many and most excellent things, most blessed in thy children'. [Kirchhoff reads with the best MS. Δπλ. έχων κ. κεὐτεκνώτατε. Porson, ὧπλ. έχων

- κάλλιστά τ' εὐτεκνώτατε, joining the two superlatives, with which cf. μέγιστον έχθιστη Med. 1323, maxime liberalissima Cicero, most highest Ps. xxi. 7 (P. Bk.).]
- 622. ως—'how'. εἰς τὸ μηδὲν—'to nought', also without the article. Soph. Εἰ. 1000, κάπὶ μηδὲν ἔρχεται.
- 623. 'Robbed of our former pride; and forsooth are puffed up', &c.
- εἶτα δῆτα—strongly sarcastic. όγκούμεθα—Aristoph. Wasps 1024, ὀγκώσαι τὸ φρόνημα.
- 626. 'Yet they (wealth and honour) are but nothing, merely'.
- 628. 'That man is happiest who day by day chances upon no ill'. Ennius, quoted by Cio. de Fin. 2. 13, nimium bonist | cui nil malist. Plato, Philebus 43 p, 'Is then the absence of pain the same as pleasure?' κατ' ήμαρ—also καθ' ημέραν.
- [629—656. Second Startmon (cf. 444 note). 'O the fatal pine with which Paris made him a ship in which to sail to Helen's bed. Then began woe for Ilion, ay and for many a Spartan maid who mourning tears her cheek'. With this chorus may be compared Horace, Odes 1. 15.]
- 629.  $\chi p \hat{\eta} v = i \chi \rho \hat{\eta} v$ : noticeable as one of the very few words which in Attic can drop their augment.
- 631. Ida—a range in Mysia, S.E. of Troy, from which in Homer the gods watched the Trojan war. 'Many fountained Ida' was famed for the 'dark tall pines that plumed the craggy ledge | high over the blue gorge' (Tennyson, Oenone). So Aytoun, 'On the holy mount of Ida | where the pine and cypress grow'.
- 632. 'Αλέξανδρος—i.e. Paris; his usual name in Homer. The accounts of him are widely inconsistent. On the one hand he is the valiant 'protector of men' ('Αλέξ-ανδρος), a kind of Romulus among the shepherds; on the other (e.g. in Horace, Od. 1. 15) the effeminate adulterer.
  - 633. Ετάμεθ' = έτάμετο from τέμνω.
- $t\pi'$  of  $t\mu\alpha$ —the acc. implies going on to and sailing on the swelling flood.
- 635. 'Ellin-wife of Menelaus, king of Sparta. Cf. Tennyson's Dream of Fair Women, 'At length I saw a lady within call, | stiller than chiselled marble, standing there; | a daughter of the gods divinely tall, | and most divinely fair. | Her loveliness with shame and with surprise | froze my swift speech: she turning on my face | the star-like sorrows of immortal eyes, | spoke slowly in her place. | I had great beauty; ask thou not my name: | no one can be more wise than destiny: | many drew swords. I died. Where'er I came | I brought calamity'.

636. Tay=#r.

- 639. ἀνάγκαι—'dooms' of the gods, especially slavery. Cf. ἀναγκαῖον θεῶν, 584 note,
- 640. κοινόν... (Sías—one man's sin, many men's suffering. The antithesis is rhetorical and occurs again 902, 3. κοινόν in grammar qualifies κακόν, in sense also συμφορά.
- 641. Σιμόας—contracted Σιμοῦς, rises in Gargarus, a peak of Ida, and flows N.W. into the Hellespont (Dardanelles).
- 643. «When—'strangers', those who were other than Trojans. [Or='from the gods'.]
- 644. Eris, not being invited to the wedding of Thetis and Peleus, avenged herself by casting a golden apple among the goddesses with this inscription, 'For the fairest'. Hera, Athene and Aphrodite each claimed it, and the case was put before the young herdsman Paris, who adjudged it to Aphrodite; with what fatal result is known to all.
- αν (α) κρ. παίδας— $\mathring{a}_r = \mathring{\eta}_r$  is cognate acc. [or the double accusative is similar to Aesch. Ag. 813—5,  $\theta$ eol... Ίλίου  $\phi\theta$ ορὰς... ψήφους έθεντο.]
- 645. μακάρων παίδας—cf. a similar circumlocution, 930, παίδες Έλλάνων.
- 647. ἐπὶ δορὶ—' with the outcome of the spear', &c. Cf. Herc. Fur. 881, ἐπὶ λώβα: Aesch. Sept. 878, δόμων ἐπὶ λύμη. 822.
  - 649. TIS-collective.
- 650. Eurotas—the river on which Sparta stood: note the alliteration in εδροον Εὐρώταν.
- 651. Αdκαινα—fem. of Λάκων: so λέων, λέαινα θεραπων, θεράπωνα. [An allusion is very possibly meant to be understood to the capture of 292 Spartan hoplites at Sphakteria, 120 of them of the highest birth, by the Athenians. This brilliant exploit was due to Demosthenes, B.C. 425. Cf. Thuc. 4.1—41.
  - 655. δρύπτω-- √δρυφ. Cf. δρέπω, ' I pluck'.

'To me was it fated that calamity, to me was it fated that suffering should come, when first Alexandros hewed him the pine-log of Ida to sail o'er the ocean wave to the bed of Helen, fairest of all on whom doth shine the golden sun. For toils and dooms stronger than toils encircle us. And a common evil sprung from one man's folly came fraught with death to the land of Simois, and calamity from strangers. And the strife was decided in which on Ida the herdsman judged the three daughters of the blessed gods with the outcome of war and of slaughter and of the ruin of my dwellings. And at home beside the fair-flowing Eurotas there weeps many a Laconian maid all bathed in tears; and the mother, her children dead, lays hand on her hoary head, dabbling her finger-nail in the bloody rendings of her cheek'.

658—904. Third Episode. [The discovery of the body of the murdered Polydorus. Agam. enters to enquire the reason of Hecuba's delay in burying her daughter, and H., after a long debate in her mind, appeals to him on behalf of her son for vengeance upon the treacherous prince of Thrace. Agam. demurs at first, half afraid of the view which the Greek army might take of any action against their ally; H. pleads that at any rate he will prevent any rescue, and she will take the vengeance into her own hands.]

[658—725. Enter an aged female attendant, who had gore to fetch water to wash Polyx.'s body, with the corpse of Polydorus. H., supposing it to be Polyx.'s, asks why it has been brought. As she receives no answer, her idea is that it may be Kasandra's. The body is uncovered, and H., in her lament, lets fall an expression which provokes the question, 'Did you know of this before?' She goes on to ask how and in what state the corpse was found, and cries that her visions have proved true. Then the Chor. asks, 'Can your wisdom of dreams tell the murderer?' 'Yes', H. at once replies, 'it is the Thracian prince', and she bursts into an indignant protest against the violation of hospitality and the sin of mutilation.]

659. θῆλυν σπορ.—cf. τὸ θῆλυ γένος, 885. Adjectives in -us are often of only two terminations. "Ηρη θῆλυς ἐοῦσα, Il. ἡδὺς ἀϋτμή, Odys., ἡμίσεος ἡμέρας, Thuc.

660. κακοῦς ἴν'—'in sorrows, wherein'. Herm.'s correction for the abrupt κακοῦσν, which is a dative of reference, denoting the aspect in which the subject shows itself, the acc. of ref. being used to denote a part of the subject itself. στέφανον—

'prize' (lit. garland of the victor at games). Cf. Wordsworth, Sonnets,

"Most wretched one!"
Who chose his epitaph? Himself alone
Could thus have dared the grave to agitate
And claim among the dead this awful crown!"

- 661. 'How! wretch, with thy ill-tongued clamour! for thy doleful messages are never quiet.' For construction cf. 211, 783. The gen. is after the analogy of the gen. of ref. with verbs of emotion.
- 664. εὐφημ. στόμα—'to have good-omened words in their mouth'. στόμ. is acc. of ref.: the phrase, like favete linguis, comes to mean silence, as though abstinence from speech were the best form of good-omened talk.
- 665. 86 $\mu$ . Eurep—'from within'. MSS. vary between this (which Schol, interprets  $\epsilon\pi\epsilon\kappa\epsilon\nu\alpha$ ) and  $\bar{\nu}\pi\sigma$  and  $d\pi\sigma$ . There is also a conjecture  $\pi d\rho\sigma s$ . See 53 n.
- 668. 'No more thou livest, though thou seest the light'. This is justified by the punctuation, and is more vigorous than ε! βλέπουσα = βλέπεις. Cf. Tennyson, 'in more of life true life no more'.
- 670. 'Thou sayest nothing new, but thy reproach has fallen on one who knows'. The plural is used rather vaguely. H. thinks that the attendant alludes to the death of Polyxena.
- 672. 'Whose burial was reported as being busily prepared at the hand of all the Achaeans'.  $d\pi\eta\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda\eta$ —verbs seldom have more than one aor. in regular use.  $d\pi\eta\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda\eta$ , which some MSS. read in Eur., is not an Attic form.  $\tau d\phi os$  nearly  $= \tau a\phi \eta$ . Sid  $\chi e\rho ds = per$ .  $\sigma \pi ov ds$ .  $\chi ev = \sigma \pi ov da \chi e \sigma da$ .
- 674. 'She knows nothing [spoken aside], but mourns, woe's me, for Polyxena'.

  µoι—Eth. dat.
- 676.  $\mu \hat{\omega} \nu (\mu \eta, o \hat{v} \nu)$ —like num, expects answer 'no'. 'Surely thou art not?'
- 677. Κασ. κάρα—an expansion of Κασάνδραν like caput in Lat. for 'person': often regard or affection is expressed, as  $\hat{\omega}$  κασίγνητον κάρα 'dear brother'. See 724 n.
- 678. 'Thy loud lament is for one who lives'. λάσκω—only used in poetry and always of loud ringing or crashing or tearing sound; it implies therefore loud talking. For the turn - of the phr. equiv. to περί with a gen. cf. Alk. 141, καὶ ζῶσαν εἰπεῖν καὶ θανοῦσαν ἔστι σοι.

- 679. γυμνωθέν—The attendant uncovers the corpse; that it was not naked we see from 734.
- 680. «t—'whether', i.e. 'to see if'. Aw.—'expectations', like spes sometimes in Lat.
  - 682. olkous-domi, poetic dat. of place. Goodwin, § 190.
  - 683. οὐκέτ' εἰμὶ δή—' now is my life o'er'.
- 685—7. 'I begin a frenzied strain with recent knowledge of woes sent by an avenger'.  $\kappa\alpha\tau d\rho\chi$ —usually with gen., has acc. also in Or. 960,  $\kappa\alpha\tau d\rho\chi$ — $\rho$ 0.  $\kappa\alpha\tau d\rho\chi$ —div. d'Ador. (d,  $\sqrt{\lambda}a\theta$ )—one who does not forget wrong, and so an avenging deity, used with and without  $\delta al\mu\omega\nu$ . The ref. here is a general one, and not to the ghost of Polydorus.  $\kappa\alpha\kappa\hat{\omega}\nu$  (for which  $\nu\epsilon\omega\nu$  is conjectured by Pors.)—is gen. of object after adjective compounded with a trans. verb. So 235,  $\kappa\alpha\rho\delta las$   $\delta\eta\kappa\tau\dot{\eta}\rho\iota\alpha=d$   $\delta\dot{\alpha}\kappa\nu\epsilon\iota$   $\tau\dot{\eta}\nu$   $\kappa\alpha\delta\dot{\delta}a\nu$ .
  - 688. ydp-'why?' 'what?' Lat. quid enim.
- 691. 'No day shall stay me from my groans and tears'. This old variant is adopted by Matthiae, who also reads  $\tilde{\eta}\mu a\rho$   $\ell\mu'$ . If the adjectives be read in the nom, the force of  $\ell\pi i\sigma\chi\eta\sigma\epsilon\iota$  will be 'come upon me', 'dawn'.
- 696. Ovigeneus =  $\ell\theta$ aves. neivau—so iaceo. Ov. Her. 8, 106, qui bene pro patria cum patriaque iacent.
  - 698. ww-for acc. see 51 n.
- 699. 'A waif upon the level sand, a victim of the murderous spear'. πέσημα exactly=cadaver: λευρά—connected with λείος, lēvis, Engl. level.
- 701. 'Cast him up from the sea'. Hdt. 1. 24, τὸν δὲ δελφῦνα λέγουσι ὑπολαβόντα ἐξενεῦκαι ἐπὶ ΤαΙναρον.
- 702. ξμαθον—'I perceive'. παρέβα—'went by', and so 'escaped'.
  - 706. dv refers back to duy.
- 708. Διὸς ἐν φάει—'light of day'. Cf. Hor. sub Iove, sub divo; 458 n.
- 709. όνειρόφρων—' by thy dream-wisdom', with a touch of sarcasm.

- 711. 'v'—' with whom' [or 'where', for Thrace is suggested by the word  $\Theta_{p'p'klos}$ , as in Andr. 652, où  $\sigma$  ar  $\mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu$  'H $\pi \epsilon \iota \rho \dot{\omega} \tau \iota \nu$ , où  $(=\dot{\epsilon} \nu$  'H $\pi \epsilon \iota \rho \dot{\omega})$ ].
- 712. 'Alas, what art thou about to say?' ξχη—so best MSS. See 27n. The variant ξχοι would leave the permanence of the result uncertain.
- 714. ἀνωνόμ.—'a deed without a name', Shakespeare, Macbeth.
- 715. οὐδ' ἀνεκτά—'and not to be borne'. A hint at vengeance. ποῦ δίκ. ξένων;—'where is the sense of right towards guests?' [or 'sense of right in hosts'], according as we consider ξένων obj. or subj. gen.
- 716. 'O most accursed of men, how hast thou hacked' for 'mutilated']. A partitive gen, with positive adj. often virtually equals a superl. Alk. 472, & φίλα γυναικών.
  - 720. white-So the two best MSS., others whiteas.
- 722. 'Whoever he be that presses on thee'. i.e. the  $\grave{a}\lambda \acute{a}\sigma\tau\omega\rho$ .
- 724. 'However, since I see the form of Agam.', &c. ἀλλὰ γὰρ—often separated by one word when a new comer is announced, e.g. Soph. Ant. 155, ἀλλ' δδε γὰρ δή βασιλεύτ...χωρεῖ. 'Αγαμ. δέμας, so Or., 'Ερμιόνης δέμας='Ερμιόνης. Iph. Aul., τούμὸν δέμας=έμε': but δέμας also has a special force like Lat. idiom used six times in Verg. (virum) corpora. See 677 n.
- [726—785. Agam, appears and chides H. for her delay in burying her daughter; he sees the body lying and asks what Trojan it is. Then H. debates in a long 'aside' whether she shall tell Agam, and ask his help, without which she can effect nothing—or bear her troubles in silence. She decides to speak. Agam, asks if she seeks a life of freedom. 'No', answers she, 'I could live a slave all my life for vengeance sake'. She then points to the body and tells him it is her son's, who was sent to Polymestor's care.]
  - 726. μελλ.—'delayest'.
- 727. On such terms as T. made known to me, that no Argive should lay hand on thy maid'. See 604.
- 729. μὲν οὖν—'well then'. εἰῶμεν...ἐψαύομεν—This is the excellent conj. of Nauck; it gets rid of the final cretic in ψαύομεν, and the addition of the impf. for ἐῶμεν makes the grammar more consistent.

- 731. 'I have come therefore (δὲ) to fetch thee away; for matters yonder have been well done, if aught of these things be right'. Gk. καλὸν approaches our sense of 'duty'. ἐστὶν καλῶς —not so common as ἔχεω in this conn., but of. 532. Soph. Ant. 637 (MS. reading), ἀξίως ἔσται. Hel. 1293, καλῶς ἀν είη.
  - 733. ta-'ha'.
- 734. 'For that he is not an Argive'. 'Αργείου—this is nearest to reading of best MS. 'Αργείου, which can only be rendered 'his non-Argive dress'. There is a variant 'Αργείων 'one of the Argives', like Iph. T. 1207, σῶν τέ μοι σύμπεμπ' ὁπαδῶν.
- 736. H. speaks aside to 752. Agam. is meanwhile amazed, then angry at it. 'O thou poor Hecuba—ay, I speak of myself when I speak of thee—what shall I do?' Spárw follows the sense rather than the strict grammar,  $\delta\rho\acute{\alpha}\sigma\epsilon\iota$ s would have been more natural. [The Schol. and Herm. wrongly thought that  $\delta\iota\acute{\alpha}\tau\eta p$ ' was an appeal to Polydorus, comparing Or. 553,  $\epsilon\mu au\tau \acute{\nu}\nu$ ,  $\dot{\eta}\nu$   $\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\gamma\omega$  |  $\kappa a\kappa\acute{\omega}s$   $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon\iota\nu\eta\nu$ ,  $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\xi}\epsilon\rho\acute{\omega}$ .]
  - 737, 8. προσπέσω...φέρω—conj. delib.
  - 739. 'Having turned thy back upon my face'.
- 740. 'But dost not state the fact, who this is'. ὅστις would be more regular. δύρει—The υ is long, and so the reading δύρει cannot stand. We find kindred forms μόργυμι, δμόργυμι, κέλλω, κ.τ.λ.
- 742. &ν...dν.—The double &ν (read by the best MSS.) is by some edds. considered too emphatic in so short a sentence, and they consequently omit the last, or, with Brunck, change the first into aν. Herm. explains by καὶ πρὸς &ν ἀλγήσαιμεν &ν, but &ν can qualify only verbs.
  - 743. 'Know that I am not'. τοι, sententious, as usual.
- 744. δδόν—'drift'. The metaphor is more drawn out Soph. O. T. 68, πολλάς δ' όδοὺς έλθόντα φροντίδος πλάνοις.
- 745. 'Do I take count of his feelings too much by the standard of enmity, while enemy he is not?' γε and ἐκ both add emphasis. Nauck conjectures ἔφ' εὐ λογιζόμεσθα.
- 748. ἐς ταὐτὸν—'thou dost but agree with me'. Supply ἐμοὶ, and in next clause after ἐγὼ; βούλομαι.
  - 750. 'Why revolve I this?'
- 752. τῶνδε γουνάτων—This gen. of appeal (which Pors. governs by πρὸς understood) may be put under the head of causal

- gen. Goodwin, § 173. Other Ionic forms found in tragedy are μοῦνος, οὔνομα, κοῦρος, δουρί, ξεῖνος, ἰρὸς. Inferior MSS. add many more.
- 755. 6406a.—'to get thy life made free'. Pflugk can hardly be right in taking this as advice to H. to commit suicide.
- 756-8. Omitted in best MSS. τιμορ-'if I take vengeance', conditional use of the participle.
- 758. και δή—'well then', 'even so'= fac ita esse. τίν' eis ex.—'to give what help?'
- 759. σίδεν—a kind of accus. of reference in connection with ἐπάρκεσω [or μαστεύω, 'I ask for', may be supplied.]
- 760. 'For whom I let the tear-drop fall'. καταστάζω—used differently in 241. [Notice the break in στιχομυθία, i.e. the arrangement of lines by which in rapid dialogue each speaker replies in the same number of lines as the questioner has used. Herm. conjectures that some remark of Agam. has fallen out between 759 and 760.]
  - 761. 'The sequel, however'.
- 762. 'Him I once brought forth and bare in my womb', lit. 'beneath my girdle'. A similar example of πρωθύστερον occurs El. 969, πῶς γὰρ κτάνω νιν ἢ μ' ἔθρεψε κἄτεκεν;
- 766. 'Yes, but without profit, as it seems'. γε qualifies ετεκον supplied from 765.
- 767. 'Where was he as it fell out?' The idea is of coincidence rather than of chance. πτόλις, metri gratia, as in Epic. Cf. πόλεμος, πτόλεμος.
  - 768. όρρ. θανείν—μη θανείν would be more usual.
- 771. Πολυμήστωρ—attracted into rel. clause; so Hipp. 101, τήνδ' ή πολαίσι σαϊς έφέστηκεν Κύπρις. This is called inverse attraction and is found also in Lat. e.g. Verg. Aen. 1. 578, urbem quam statuo vestra est.
- 772.  $\ell \nu \pi a \hat{\nu} \theta' = \text{both } illic$  and illuc. 'In charge of most cruel gold'. This may be a transferred epithet as  $\pi \iota \kappa \rho$ , should here properly belong to Polymestor. Cf. Verg. Aen. 1. 855, crudeles aras.
- 774. τίνος γ'—'why, at whose hand else?' Elmsley would change γε into δὲ on the ground that γε cannot occur in a question, and Pors. reads τίνος πρὸς ἄλλου;
  - 775. ἢ που—'I suppose he lusted to get gold'.

- 776. τοιαῦτ'—' even so'. Aristoph. has ταῦτα in same sense.
  - 780. φχετο-virtually plupf. 'She was gone to fetch'.
- 782. θαλασσόπλαγκτόν γε—'yes, to be tossed on the sea, as thou beholdest'. The adj. is used proleptically, i.e. it anticipates the result of the action of the verb.
- 783.  $\sigma \chi \epsilon \tau \lambda (a [\sqrt{\sigma \chi \epsilon} \text{ which also appears in parts of } \epsilon \chi \omega]$ . There is a double notion of wretch and wretchedness in the word. For gen. see 661 n.
  - 784. 'I am undone and nought of evil remains untried'.
- 785, 6. δυστυχής...τύχην—for a kindred play on words of. Milton, Paradise Lost, Bk. 2, 'surer to prosper than prosperity', and Trabea, quoted by Cio. Tusc. disp. 4. 31, fortunam ipsam anteibo fortunis meis. Ter. Adelph. 761, ipsa si cupiat salus | servare prorsus non potest hanc familiam.
- [786—845. H. appeals to Agam. 'Hear and help me: this man was my most familiar guest-friend ($\xi\textit{e}tot$) and has violated all rights of hospitality. I indeed am myself weak, but the gods are strong and the principle or law on which they act. This now devolves on you to carry out. O, have pity! contrast my former state with my present forlornness. What, will you go from me? Oh! why are we not taught persuasion's art as everything beside? I have no hope: my children are gone, my city burned. Then, too, I would urge the argument of love: this dead boy is your relation, since you have wedded Kasandra. O for a voice in every part of me to plead my cause: help, help me, 'tis a noble man's part'.]
- 786. toriy—'exists'. Observe position of the accent. Myois—'unless thou shouldst mention'. λέγεις of some MSS. puts the idea rather more definitely.
- 787. ofvek'—'on account of'. Eveka usually follows its case: MSS. vary between ovveka and elveka: most modern editors prefer the former.
- 788. Some denotes the divine spirit of equity which overrides  $\tau \delta$  discov.
  - 789. στέργ. αν-' I will be content'.
- 790. dvδρès—used much as French Monsieur le, &c. So Ajax uses it of his bitterest foe Hektor, where (says Jebb) the word gives a certain tone of distance and aversion to the mention of a well-known but hated name.

793 sqq. 'Though he had oft shared my board with me and in count of hospitality was in the first rank of my friends—yet, though he had got all that was proper and had received all consideration', &c. Vv. 794,  $\delta$  are perhaps spurious: there is a great deal of unnecessary repetition in them and they are open to two objections, (1)  $\tau \nu \chi \epsilon \hat{\nu} \nu$  governs an acc. unless  $\pi \rho \hat{\omega} \tau \alpha$  be taken adverbially. Musgrave suggested  $\xi t \nu i \alpha \tau'$ , dona hospitalia. (2) Some participle seems required. Hence Porson well conjectured  $\pi \rho \hat{\omega} \tau \alpha$  of  $\omega$ .

795. προμηθίαν—some see here a reference to 1137, 'having taken full forethought,' but the true sense seems to be that which is given above, as more in harmony with the rest of what H. says [or, 'when he had got all that was needful (for Polydorus) and had taken him in charge'—a doubtful sense of προμηθίαν]. Variants are προμισθίαν (Musgrave), προθυμίαν (Herm.).

796, 7. P.'s crime was aggravated by his treatment of the corpse: for an unburied shade wandered about on the banks of the Styx and could get no rest for 100 years. Verg. Aen. 6. 324.

798. µky ofv—'then', 'to sum up'. tows—idiomatically used as in English, though no doubt is expressed.

(i.) 'But the gods are strong and so is law which controls them, a law by which we deem the gods to be, whereby we live with our views of right and wrong defined: and should this law, when it has been referred to thee, be set at nought', &c. The νόμος in this case will be some high principle superior even to the gods themselves, not unlike 'Ανάγκη of which Eur. Alk. 978 says, καὶ γὰρ Ζεὐς ὅτι νεύση | σύν σοι τοῦτο τελευτᾶ.

(ii.) vóµos='law', in its more usual sense. Eur, then says that law is superior to the gods because the state could dictate who should and who should not be worshipped. Socrates was condemned, we know, because he was accused of disallowing the state-gods. (iii.) If we substitute 'convention'.

- for 'law' we have the sophistic theory which Eur. is generally supposed to have held. This is Paley's view.
- (iv.) A schol, takes a somewhat different view. 'The gods are strong and their law which rules men: for we think that by law the gods (rule)'. Then Hec. implies that Agam. as administrator of justice is for the time being in the place of the gods.
- 801. Δρισμένοι. This may be passive or middle, see 114 n. τωμεν—little more than ἐσμέν.
- 804. tod....\phi freev....'violate', metaph. from carrying off plunder. Sacrilege is out of place in connexion with P.'s crime, except in so far as  $\xi \epsilon \nu t a$  violated would be a sin, or religious offence, so that perhaps a reference is intended to some contemporary event. [tpds, connected with Sanskrit ishira, means 'sound', 'fresh', 'strong', as we see in relation to  $\eta \mu a \rho$ ,  $\delta \mu \beta \rho o s$ ,  $\kappa \partial \mu a$ ,  $\mu \epsilon \nu o s$ . The meaning 'sacred' arises from the fact that nothing blemished or unsound could be offered to the gods.]
- 806.  $\epsilon v$  alox $\rho \hat{\varphi}$   $\theta \epsilon \mu$ .—'regarding these things as disgraceful', so  $\epsilon v$   $\kappa \alpha \lambda \hat{\varphi}$   $\tau l \theta \epsilon \sigma \theta a\iota$  is used.
- 807. Δε γραφ.— as a painter stand off and look upon me and scan the miseries which I endure. A painter would get a better idea of a picture as a whole by standing away from it.
  - 810. oboa—substituted by way of variety for  $\eta_{\nu}$ .
- 812. 'Whither stealthily (ὑπό) withdrawest thou thy foot from me?' Agam. makes a movement to go. The phrase = φείγω and so governs an acc. Porson's rendering quo me cogis te sequi is forced, and Musgrave's ποι μετεξάγεις has no authority.
- 813. 'I seem likely to accomplish nought'. πράξειν—the fut. (not pres.) inf. is usual after βούλομαι, ὑπισχνέομαι and other verbs in which the object of the expectation (wish, hope, &c.) is something future.
- 817. is τέλος—'to perfection', a sense conveyed in its derivative τέλειος.
- 818. v'  $\eta v = (=\dot{\epsilon}\xi\hat{\eta}v)$  'in which case it were in our power'. This is Elmsley's conjecture for v'  $\dot{\eta}$  of some MSS. and is perhaps the original reading of the best MS. It is an instance of the peculiar usage with final conjunctions  $(v_{\alpha}, \dot{\omega}, \delta \pi \omega_s)$  which are followed by past tense of indic, where the consequence is in fact an impossible one. Cf. Hipp. 647, Έν είχον μηδέ προσφωνεῖν τινα.

- 820. τις—meaning herself, as we use 'one'. See David Copperfield, chap. 24. "I observed that he always spoke of himself indefinitely as 'a man' and seldom or never in the first person singular...'a man might get on very well here', &c." ἐπτίσαι, Attic writers usually adopted the Aeolic forms σειας, σειε in 2nd and 3rd sing.; but we find ἀρπαλίσαι, λέξαι (Aesch.), ἀλγύναις (Soph.), κτίσαι (Eur.), ἀκούσαις, φήσαις (Plato).
- 821. ci μὶν γὰρ ὄντες—'for my former sins.' So the best MSS. for which Weil proposes ποτ' ὅντες and many editors τοσοῦτοι after later MSS., which perhaps suggests as the true reading ol μὲν τότ'.
- 822. 'And I myself with shame perish a captive of the spear'. In implies the conditions: slavery involves menial and degrading services.
  - 823. τόνδε—'yonder'.
- 824. kal µ†v introduces a fresh plea—'And look you—although this perchance is a vain part of my appeal—the plea of love, to wit'.
- 825. etpigrera.—'yet it shall be spoken'. The fut. perf. has often no perf. signification, especially in defective verbs.
- 827. 'K. the inspired, for so the Phrygians style her'. Κασάνδρα—this emendation for Κασάνδρα» proposed by Herm. is very good, for it is idle to say that the Phrygians called her Kasandra, unless indeed she had both a Trojan and Greek name, as Alexander and Paris, Pyrrhus and Neoptolemus.
- 828. 'In what way, sire, I ask  $(\delta \hat{\eta} \tau a)$ , wilt thou acknowledge thy nights of joy, or shall my daughter have any benefit of her sweetest wifely caresses, or I of her?'  $\chi \acute{a}\rho \iota \nu$  merely  $=\epsilon \check{\nu} \nu o \iota a \nu$ , and the sense is that, marriage being a close connexion, H. would expect to get some benefit from the relationship.
- 831, 2. Spurious.  $\pi \dot{\alpha} \nu \nu$  says Pors. is rare in tragedy, and Pflugk shows that  $r \dot{\omega} \nu \nu \nu \kappa \tau$ .  $\tau$ .  $\phi$ . must be taken together, and then no sense results. [Nauck reads  $\nu \nu \kappa \tau \epsilon \rho \eta \sigma l \omega \nu$ .]
  - 835. 'One thing yet my speech doth lack'.
- 836. et use yev.—'would that I had', an elliptical form like el ydp, elle, to express a wish. So si in Lat.

837. κόμαισι — Musgr. objects that mourners shaved their heads, and that so the word is inappropriate: but the remark applies rather to hired mourners than to the queenly Hecuba. He suggested κόραισι, 'pupils of the eyes', and even κνήμαισι, which is singularly inelegant.

ποδων βάσει = ποσλ δι' ων βαίνω.

- 838. Δαιδάλου—the recognised master of clever engineering and mechanical appliance, and of architecture and statuary. His sculptures seemed to move and speak: thus Eur. fragm. Eurysth. τα Δαιδάλεια πάντα κινείσθαι δοκεί | βλέπευ τ' άγαλμαθ' ώδ' ἀνὴρ κείνος σοφός.
- 839. Δε ξχοιτο—'that weeping in concert they might cling to thy knees, urging all manner of pleadings'. ξχοιτο, better than ξχοιτο, of two good MSS., for where objects introduced by a neut. plur. are regarded as a united whole (and ὁμαρτῆ here combines them) a singular verb is used.
- 842.  $\pi \alpha \rho \acute{a} \sigma \chi es$ —almost all MSS  $\pi \acute{a} \rho a \sigma \chi e$ , which is admissible in compounds, as  $\kappa a \tau \acute{a} \sigma \chi e$ , H. Fur. 1210, though the simple verb always has  $\sigma \chi \acute{e}s$ .
  - 843. 'Although she be nought'.
- 844. 'Tis the part of a good man', possessive gen. Goodwin, § 169.
- 846 sqq. The Chor. comments on the irony of fate which makes Hec. appeal for help to a notorious enemy against her former friend. 'Wonder indeed how with men all things clash, and how their closest ties are determined by laws of circumstance which make their deadliest foes their friends!' νόμοι—we have a parallel in Bacch. 484 οΙ νόμοι δὲ διάφοροι. Musgrave's alteration χρόνοι, though it simplifies matters, is not necessary. ἀνάγκας, any tie of affection, or even—Lat. necessitudo. διέρ. is the gnomic acrist.
- [850—904. Agam. expresses his deep pity and says that he would gladly help her but he is not a free agent: the army regard Polym. as a friend, and he cannot afford to come inteill odour with them. Hec. makes a reflection that no man is quite free; he is hampered by considerations of chance, or money, or multitude, or law. She asks Agam. at least to restrain any assistance from the Greeks, and she will do the rest. How? asks Agam. H. replies that she has many Trojan dames at hand to help, and cites the Lemnian affair and the murder by the Danaids as instances of women's power. She then sends an attendant to summon Polymestor and his children, and Agam. expresses his good wishes for the result.]

850.  $\sigma \theta ev = \sigma ov$  in Attic as well as Epic. Some grammarians class this as a sixth case, meaning 'from', as  $olko\theta ev$ , ' $A\theta \eta v \eta \theta ev$ .

851. 'I regard with pity'. Similarly δί οίκτου λαβεῖν, Suppl. 194. δί αίσχύνης έχω. Ι. Τ. 683.

854. φανείη γ'.—'If in any way it should appear possible for thy plan to succeed, and for me to avoid appearing to the army to have planned this death against the king of Thrace for K.'s sake'. The opt. expresses A's doubt as to the possibility of keeping the matter secret. The τε should stand strictly after φαν. or else μὴ δόξαιμι be changed to ἐμέ τε στρατῷ μὴ δόξαι. [The best writers are often careless about particular words, thinking of the adjustment of the whole.]

857. Forth  $\hat{\eta}$ .—'there is one point'. Forth often combines with a relative adverb to form a fresh adverb. Forth  $\nu\alpha$ ,  $\delta\tau\epsilon$ , 'sometimes'. 'often'. So in Lat, est ubi = interdum.

859. 'If yonder man is friend of mine, this is a private matter, and the army has no share therein'. et  $\delta'$  eucl—is Elmsley's conjecture, and is preferable in sense to et  $\delta\epsilon'$  ou.

. 861. πρὸς ταῦτα—'therefore'. The phrase is idiomatically used, not to express a reason but a fixed resolve. Soph. El. 820, πρὸς ταῦτα καινέτω τις ='now'.

863. 'If I am to be evil spoken of by the Achaeans'. Dat. of agent with passive verb for υπο with gen. From δια-βάλλω comes διάβολος, 'the accuser'.

864. φεῦ—'O fie!' Expressing contempt rather than sorrow. δστις—vaguer than δε, Lat. qui with subj.

866. πόλεως—a rarer form of πόλεως, a remnant of the old gen. in -ηος, which latter does not appear in tragedy till Eur. Attic generally disliked the combination -ηο. ναὸς, λαὸς, are genuine Attic forms.

867. 'Stay him so that he uses a temper not accordant to his judgment'; or 'keep him from using such temper as he would',  $\mu \eta$  is redundant according to the Gk. idiom which multiplies negatives; it is a little out of place on the second rendering.

868. **πλέον νεμ...-nimium tribuis, as in Suppl. 243, νέμοντες τῷ φθόνφ πλέον μέρος. Eur. was not the radical Aristoph. makes him.

- 869. 'I will rid thee of this fear'.
- 870. ξύνισθι—from ξύνοιδα. H. urges him to be accessory before the fact without taking any ostensible part in the revenge.
- 871. συνδράσης δὶ μή— But take no active share therein'. μὴ σύνδρα, μὴ συνδράσης are good, μὴ συνδρᾶς (conj.), μὴ συνδρᾶσον bad, though the latter form is very rarely found.
- 872. 'But if there arise on the part of the Achaeans any riot or rescue, while the man of Thrace is suffering what suffer he shall, stop it without appearing to do so for my sake'. πασχ.—gen. abs., for ἐπικουρ. would require a dat. μή, not ού, because the phrase=μη δόκει. χάριν—virtually a prep. and ἐμην χάριν=ἐμοῦ χάριν. Other adverbial accus. are πρόφασιν, τέλος, τρόπον, ὁδὸν, ἀρχην, πέρας, and δίκην.
- 876. oùv—' pray', sareastic.  $\phi$ áσγανον—for σφάγανον, from σφάζω, cf.  $\theta$ ρέψω=τρέφσω.
- 880. 'The tents conceal a number of Trojan dames.' The perf. = a present like οίδα, δέδοικα, πεφόβημαι, πέφυκα, εστηκα, δλωλα, κέκτημαι, κέκλημαι, μέμνημαι, πέποιθα. [Some MSS. read κεκεύθουσι a Dorio form, of. δεδοίκω, κεκλήγω, πεφύκω.]
- 882.  $\phi$ ovéā—In Lat.  $\check{\alpha}$  is short, as Orpheā, and twice in Eur., in all other places long. It may perhaps in some places be read as one syllable,  $\phi$ ovēā.
  - 883. και πώς—'pray, how?' Cf. 515 n.
- 885. μέμφομαι—'I have a poor opinion of'. So μέμψιν έχειν, Aesch. P. V. 445.
- 886. Alγόπτ.—The Danaides murdered their husbands, fifty in number, sons of Aegyptus, on their wedding-night, the only one who was spared being Lynkeus, whom his wife Hypernnestra saved.
- 887. 'Utterly depopulated Lemnos of males'. The more usual constr. is found in 948.  $d\rho\delta\eta\nu$ —contracted from  $d\epsilon\rho\delta\eta\nu$ , properly means 'lifted up on high'. [When the Argonauts landed at Lemnos they found that the women had slain their own husbands, except perhaps the king Thoas (Hdt. 6, 188).]
- 888. ως γενέσθω—' so be it'. ως = ούτως. γενέσθω, better than γενέσθαι of most MSS.
  - 889. 'Send me this lady'. µoı—dat. ethic.

- 890.  $\pi \lambda a\theta \epsilon i \sigma u$ —(not  $\pi \lambda a \sigma \theta \epsilon i \sigma a$ ) from  $\pi \lambda a' \theta \omega$ , collat. form of  $\pi \epsilon \lambda a' \omega$ ; this participle is chiefly confined to choral parts.
- 892. 'On thy business no less than hers'. χρέος is like χάριν in 874. So Lat. tuam vicem.
  - 895.  $\tau \dot{\alpha} \phi o v = \tau a \phi \dot{\eta} v$ . Cf. 672.
- 896. 748' d84A... 'That these two, brother and sister, side by side on one pyre, twofold grief to their mother, may be buried in the earth.'
- 898. '(And it may be so) for if the army had been able to sail I could not have granted thee this favour: but, as it is, for the god sends not favouring breezes, remain we must, watching quietly for a chance of sailing'.
- 900. ໂησι—t doubtful, as in λίαν, ἰῶμαι, ἰατρός. ὁρωντας may refer back to στρατόν, a noun of multitude. ἤσυχον, advb., for πλούς ἦσυχος is a very unusual phrase. [ὀρῶντά μ., Herm.'s conj. is a decided improvement, and one MS. has -ῶντα. Dindorf adopts Hartung's ἡσύχους].
- 905-952. Third Stasimon. 'Thou, O my native Ilium, no more shalt count thyself as one of cities unsacked: such a cloud of Hellenes shrouds thee round and hath sacked thee with the spear, even the spear. Of thy coronal of towers art thou shorn, and with most piteous stain of smoky flame art all defiled; forlorn one, never more shall I tread (thy streets). At midnight my destruction began, when after banqueting sweet sleep is spread upon the eyes, and my lord had made me cease from song and choral sacrifice, and lay upon his bed, his spear on its peg, watching no more for the thronging sailors entering Ilian Troy. I was arranging my hair in the snood that bound it up, gazing into the mirror's vista'd light, to sink upon my cushioned bed: then through the city came a ringing shout, and down Troy's streets the cry was this, "Sons of the Hellenes, when, oh when will ye have sacked the Ilian citadel and reached your homes?" Then left I my loved bed in a single robe like some Dorian maid, but—unhappy—I gained nought by my session at awful Artemis' shrine. But I saw my bedfellow dead, and am borne away o'er the deep salt sea, and looking back upon my city, as the ship started on her return and sundered me from the land of Ilium, in my misery I fainted from grief, devoting to curses Helen sister of the Dioscori, and the shepherd of Ida, Paris the dread, since his marriage—no marriage that, but some woe

- of the avenger—drove me in ruin from my fatherland and exiled me from home. Her may the salt sea ne'er carry back, never may she reach her ancestral home!
- 906. τῶν ἀπορθ.—sc. πολέων, partitive gen. Goodwin, § 169. The constr. is imitated by Hor. Odes 3. 13, fies nobilium tu quoque fontium.
- λέξει—Cf. our use of the word 'tell'. This fut. may very possibly be passive; for about 100 Greek verbs, most of them with pure stems, have a passive sense in their fut. middle, e.g. Alk. 322, dλλ' αὐτίκ' ἐν τοῖς οὐκέτ' οὖσι λέξομαι.
- 907. vécos—used of any great number. So Livy 42. 10 nubes telorum, and Verg. Aen. 12. 254, facta nube, cf. Heb. xii. 1 'cloud of witnesses'.
- 910. dποκέκ.—perf. pass. of ἀποκέιρω, used here in a middle sense, which accounts for the acc. The phrase ἀποκείρεσθαι κόμαs is common enough. See also 114 n. For στεφ. πυργ. cf. Soph. Ant. 124, στεφάνωμα πύργων | "Ηφαιστον πευκάεθ' ἐλεῖν.
- 912. κηλίδ'.—Pors. makes this dat. and reads οἰκτροτάτφ, but it is doubtful if final ι of dat. can be so elided. The acc. is a kind of cognate acc.
  - 915. ήμος-Hom. word. ἐκ δείπνων = ex cena, 55 n.
- 916. κίδναται—or σκίδναται. Same root as scindo, quasi σκίνδμι.
- 918. καταπαύσας—It is easy to supply  $\epsilon\mu\epsilon$ , though it may be for καταπαύσαμενος, cf. 1108. Various readings so as to introduce an acc. are χοροποιόν and χαροποιόν θυσιάν.
  - 921. vaútav-adjectival in sense.
- 926. ἀτερμ. els αὐγὰs—The allusion is to the vista which meets our gaze when we look into a mirror. The Schol. interprets 'round' like ἀπείρονα γαῖαν, making it a transferred epithet. Weil thinks that the mirror looks at one without ceasing.
- 927. ἐπιδέμνιον—This for ἐπιδέμνιος, which would be very otiose, is due to Pors. [Musgrave conjectured ἐπιδείπνιος.]
- 931. Ίλ. σκοπιάν—i.e. Pergamus. Cf. Homer's Ἰλιος ἡνεμόεσσα.

- 933. The Dorian girls often wore only a single light garment (χιτώνιον), fastened with clasps down the side. See Mahaffy, Gk. Antiquities p. 46.
- 940.  $\pi 68a$ .—prob. not technically the 'sheet' [pes in Catull. 4. 20, utrumque Iuppiter | simul secundus incidisset in pedem] but of motion generally. Cf. 1020.
- 945. αἰνόπαριν—Cf. Hom. Il. 3. 39, δύσπαρις, and for the whole sentiment Aesch. Agam. 689, ἐλέναυς, ἔλανδρος, ἐλέπτολις (of Helen), and Androm. 103, Ἰλί $\omega$  αἰπειν $\hat{\alpha}$  Πάρις οὐ γάμον ἀλλά τιν' ἄταν | ἡγάγετ'.
  - 951. dv-sc. Helen.
- [952—1022. Enter Polymestor the cruel Thracian king: he hypocritically expresses sorrow for Hecuba's accumulated miseries and excuses his delay in coming. Hecuba puts some searching questions to him about her boy and the treasures search with him; and on pretence of showing him other treasures hid within the tent she induces him and his children to enter with her.]
- 953. It seems quite natural that P. overdoing his part should address Priam as well as Hecuba. Nauck and others however condemn the verse.
- 956. οὐκ οὐδὲν—a stronger form of οὐδέν, whereas οὐδὲν οὐ would mean 'everything'. Lat. nihil non.
  - 957. αδ-with πράξειν κακώς.
- 958. 'And the gods stir them up backwards and forwards, introducing confusion, that through ignorance we may worship them'. αὐτά—i. e. prosperity and adversity. ψύρονσι—as if they were the ingredients of a pudding. ἀγνωσία—causal dative, Goodwin, § 188. The ignorance is of course ignorance of the future.
- 960. 'But why need one lament over these things, advancing not ahead of his evils?' The metaphor is from the pioneers of an army.
- 962. 'If thou blame me at all for'.  $\tau$ 1—cognate acc. Goodwin, § 159 note 1: the object of  $\mu \ell \mu \phi \epsilon \iota$  viz.  $\mu \epsilon$  is easily understood from the context.
- τ. έ. ἀπουσίας—causal gen. Goodwin, § 173. 2. μέμφομαι is followed by two constructions: (1) μέμφομαι τινί τι οδίσίο aliquid alicui; (2) μ. τινά τινος (as here). Cf. γράφομαι Φλικτον φόνου.

963.  $\sigma_X$  'restrain it' (viz.  $\tau \delta \mu \ell \mu \phi \epsilon \sigma \theta \alpha \iota$ ): more usually  $\ell \pi \iota \sigma_X \epsilon_1$ : not 'restrain thyself' which would rather be middle, but yet is constantly used for 'stop'.

τυγχάνω—although ἢλθες is acrist. So 1134 δίδωσι and ἢν. 'As it happened I was away in the midland districts of Thrace when thou camest hither, and on my arrival this servant of thine meets me as I am already lifting my foot from the tents'.  $\pi \delta \delta^*$  αξορντι=  $\ell \xi \dot{\omega}_{FT}$ .

967. κλύων—cf. ἄγων 369 note.

968. αἰσχύνομαι προσβλέπειν—'I shrink from looking at'. αl. προσβλέπων would mean 'I look upon with shame', cf. 552 note.

971—was suspected by Porson, who proposed either to place it after 972, or to read καν for έν, οὐκ for κούκ. Other editors are more sweeping; Dindorf condemns 970—975, Hartung 978—975.

τυγχάνουσα agrees not with alδώτ  $\mu$ ' έχει but with alδοῦμαι for which this is an equivalent: so Ion 927, ὑπεξαντλῶν—alρει  $\mu$ ε (=alρομαι). 「να—' wherein'.

972. The object of  $\pi \rho \sigma \sigma \beta \lambda \epsilon \pi \epsilon \nu$  is  $\tau \sigma \hat{\nu} \tau \sigma \nu$ , to be supplied from  $\tilde{\sigma} \tau \omega$ .  $\sigma \epsilon$  which is read generally is omitted in the best MS.

όρθαις κορ.—' with unaverted eyes', Iph. Aul. χαῖρ' οὐ γὰρ ὀρθοις δμμασίν σ' ξτ' εἰσορῶ. Hor. Od. 1. 3, 18, rectis oculis (Bentley's conj. for siccis).

973. 'But regard it not as enmity to thee'. She really feared to betray her purpose by the hate gleaming from her eyes. αὐτὸ—i.e. τὸ μή με προσβλέπειν σε. σέθεν—objective gen. after δύσνοιαν. Goodwin, § 167. 3.

μὴ ἡγήση – In prohibitions μὴ λῦε, μὴ λύσης are good, μὴ λύης, μὴ λῦσον bad Greek. Goodwin, § 254. See 871 n.

974. 'And moreover custom also is to some extent the cause that women look not straight at men'. altrov regularly takes acc. and inf.

976. και...γε. 'Ay, and no wonder'. The phrase is common in tragedy.

τίς χρεία σ' ἐμοῦ; 'What need hast thou of me?' sc. ἔχει. Cf. Homer Il. 11. 606, τί δέ σε χρεὼ ἐμεῖο;

977. 'Wherefore didst thou send for me from the house?' τι χρήμα—Goodwin, § 160. 2, cf. χάριν 892 n. ἐπέμψω=μετε-

 $\pi \epsilon \mu \psi \omega$ . The middle often has a causal sense:  $\gamma \rho d \phi \omega$ , 'I write',  $\gamma \rho d \phi \omega \mu \omega$ , 'I get written'.

978. δη—emphasises έμαυτης, giving the reason why solitude was desirable.

979. ordovas—his escort, not before mentioned. Euripides has not explained how the same king was on good terms with both Greeks and Trojans. Probably he had in mind the shifting policy of the Thracian kings of his own day.

983. σε χρην—so the best MS. The others σὲ χρη.

986. εἰπὰ παΐδα εἰ ζ.—'Tell me if my son yet lives'. Greek emphasises the subject of a dependent clause by making it the object of the principal verb; cf. Eur. Andr. 645, τι δῆτ' ἀν είποις τοὺς γέροντας ὡς σοφοί.

&-i.e. having received him from.

988. τα δ. σε έρήσομα. Greeks could say either έρομαί σε οτ έρομαί τι, and here the two constructions are combined: cf. Pind. Ol. 6. 81, ἄπαντας ἐν οἴκφ είρετο παίδα, '(The king) asked all in the house about the child'.

989. μάλιστα—' certainly (he lives)'.

τὸ ἐκείνου μέρος—'with regard to him'. Rhes. 405, τὸ σὸν μέρος.

μέν—virtually='at any rate'. 'Whatever thy other woes, in him' &c.

990. Notice here and elsewhere in the play the 'tragic Irony' which consists in the speaker's words meaning much more to the audience than to the person to whom they are addressed.

991. 'What pray in the next place wouldst thou learn of me?' Polym. repeats Hecuba's own word δεύτερον.

992. Verg. Aen. 3. 341, ecqua tamen puero est amissae cura parentis.

993. 'Yes, and sought to come hither to thee by stealth'. κρύψιος—adj. for adv. Cf. Gray's Elegy, 'How jocund did they drive their team afield!' ως—only in Attic and nearly always 'to' persons.

994. 8v  $\xi \chi \omega \nu$ —'in possession of which'. With verbs of coming and the like, the participles  $\xi \chi \omega \nu$ ,  $\phi \epsilon \rho \omega \nu$ , often mean little more than cum, 'together with'.

995. 'Safe, at all events (γε) guarded, &c.'

996. 'Nor lust after what is thy neighbour's'. τὰ πλήστον = τὰ τῶν πλήστον is a most rare construction. πλήστον being an adverb needs the article before it can represent a substantive. For governs the gen. of the thing aimed at.

997. "Kurra — by no means', minime; an instance of softening down.

οναίμην—'May I but enjoy my present estate'. Alk. 335, τῶνδ' δνησιν εύχομαι | θεοῖς γενέσθαι. Polym. deprecates covetousness; ὀνίναμαι, ἀπολαύω, and other verbs of enjoying, take a gen. which is perhaps partitive.

998, 9. d' τοῦτο—coming together have offended some critics, it would seem without cause. Brunck reads ταῦτα, Porson δ.

1000. for  $^{\prime}$  &  $\phi$ .—'There is, oh thou that art beloved as thou art now beloved by me'. P. What is it that I and my children must know? H. Ancient vaults of gold belonging to the house of Priam'. Polymestor in his greedy haste interrupts her, and this accounts for the sing. for followed by the plural  $\kappa ar \omega \rho \nu \chi e s$ . This Schema Pindaricum, i. e. singular verb with plural noun is rare in Attic, cf. Shakespeare, 'His steeds to water at those springs | on chaliced flowers that lies.

3. $\phi$. $\phi$ $\phi$

1003. ταῦτα—usually refers to what precedes.

1004. 'Certainly, through thee; for thou art a pious man', with especial and bitter reference to his impious treatment of her son.

1008. "va-" where are 'sc. elolv.

1010. γης ύπερτελλουσα—' rising above the earth'. Cf. Or. 6, κορυφής ύπερτελλουσα δειμαίνων πέτρον.

1011.  $\xi \pi \iota$ —'any more', like French encore, a virtually comparative particle.  $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \ \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \hat{\epsilon}$ —'concerning matters there'  $= \pi \epsilon \rho l \ \tau \hat{\omega} \nu \ \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \hat{\epsilon} \hat{\iota}$ .

1013. 'Where, pray? or hast thou hidden it within thy robes?'  $\hat{\eta}$  seems better than  $\hat{\eta}$ . kpúhao' kxes—Lat. occultum habes, stronger than  $\kappa \epsilon \kappa \rho \nu \phi as$ .

1014. σκύλα—spoils, stripped from a fallen enemy (σκύλλω, I strip), but the word is used in a wider signification here.

1015. 'But where? For here are the enclosures where harbours the Achaeans' fleet'. It would of course be hard for Trojan slaves to hide any large amount of gold. Hecuba explains that the tents of the women are private.

1016. 'Are things within quite safe, and is there an absence of males?'

1018. ἡμεῖς μόναι. The fem. is no violation of Dawes' canon (cf. 237 n.), for she alludes not to herself alone but to all the Trojan women.

1019. kal ydp-' for in truth'.

1020. λῦσαι πόδα—cf. 940, note.

1021, 2. 'That thou mayest go back with thy children to where thou didst lodge my son'. This is the climax of Hecuba's irony. She means to Hades; Polymestor, not aware that she knew of his treachery, thinks that she means safe away to Thrace.

[1023—1055. Polymestor follows Hecuba into the tents, and the Chorus sing a short ode to prepare the minds of the audience for the cries of Polymestor, who rushes in, his eyes blinded and children slain before his eyes.]

1023. Addressed to Polymestor. τσως—'equally', i.e. 'none the less'. Thy punishment is as certain as if already inflicted.

1025 sqq. 'Like a man that has reeled and fallen into some harbourless sea, having forfeited thy being thou shalt lose thy dear life. For where liability to Justice and to the gods coincide, deadly, ay deadly is the calamity' with which the offender expiates his crime. [It is impossible that 'to fall from one's dear life' is good Greek for 'to die', and καρδία is rather the seat of feeling than of life. The verses are in all probability corrupt.] ἀντλος—not 'a hold' but 'bilge-water'; here and in Pindar of the sea; the radical meaning of the word seems to be that of stagnant water. λέχριος—otherwise explained 'by a lurch of the vessel' Pflugk. φίλας—an epic epithet, like Homer's φίλον ήτορ. ἐκπέση, the other reading, is not Attic.

1027. dulpous—possibly means 'having deprived Polymestor of life'; here only is the word used in tragedy. of—the correction of Hemsterhuys for the MS. reading ov.

1032.  $\delta\delta \hat{o}\hat{u}$ —gen. after  $\psi\epsilon\hat{u}\sigma\epsilon\iota$ , involving separation, Goodwin, § 174.

1033. θανάσιμον—' to thy death' proleptic with σέ.

1034. ἀπολέμφ χερl—cf. Judg. 9. 54 (Abimelech to his armourbearer), 'Draw thy sword, and slay me, that men say not of me, A woman slew him'. The dative is causal, Goodwin, § 188.

1035. Polymestor is heard screaming behind the scenes.

1037. 'Yet again alas for your unhappy butchery'.

1038. 'Dears, terrible evils have been wrought within'. Kand.—'fresh', and so 'strange', 'terrible'.

1039. 'Be sure ye shall not escape'. où µŋ with aorist conjunctive is an emphatic denial, with future indic. 2nd pers. sing. a strong prohibition.

1040. 'For I will strike and burst open the inmost recesses of these tents!' i.e. no seclusion will protect them from his fury.

dvapp.—dva- as in dv-οίγω, dva-πετάννυμι. The doubled ρ represents the pronunciation.

1041. 'Look! the blow of his heavy hand is sped forth'. The verse is more appropriate in the mouth of the Chorus.

1042. βούλεσθε—The leader of the Chorus asks the other Trojan dames ἐπεισπέσωμεν—Goodwin, § 256.

1044. μηδέν—adverbial. ἐκβάλλων—'pulling up' from the ground.

1045, 6. où,...où—The asyndeton is for effect.

1046. obs έκτ. ¿.—Triumphantly addressed to the audience, and in strong antithesis to ζώντας.

1047. 'What? didst thou overthrow the Thracian, and hast thou, mistress, the mastery over thy guest-friend?' i ydo—expressing mixed admiration and surprise,—'Can it be that?'

1050. τυφλφ π. ποδι—'with blind unsteady step'. A favourite phrase of Euripides, found three times in Phoen. 834, 1539, 1616: cf. τυφλην χέρα ib. 1699, πόδα τυφλόπουν ib. 1550. Milton, Samson Agonistes, 'lend thy guiding hand | to these dark steps'.

1054. 'But I will depart and stand out of the way of the most formidable Thracian boiling over with rage'. exwosely—w. dat. cf. 52 note.

1055. Léont—Barnes' correction for the βέοντι of the MSS., which does not offer a very good sense. Dem. de Cor. p. 272, πολλφ βέοντι καθ' ὑμᾶς, is not strictly parallel. Cf. Soph. Oed. Col. 434, ὁπηνίκ' ἔξει θυμός. [Verbs with monosyllabic stem in e contract only ee and εει, so ζέω, ξεῖς, ξεῖτον, ζέομεν, ξεῖτε, ξέονσι. Δέω, I bind, is the only exception and is contracted in most forms. Goodwin, § 98 note 1, p. 98.] θυμφ—dat. of reference.

[1056—1106. Polymestor bursts on to the stage like a wild beast, groping and stumbling, his eyes streaming with blood. He dare not leave his children, yet longs to tear his enemies limb from limb, and calls upon Greeks and Thracians for aid. Whither shall he go? To Orion, or Seirius, or the dark ferry which leads to hell?]

1057. κέλσω—'put in', sc. τὴν ναῦν. Delib. conj. Goodwin, § 256. [The forms κέλλω and ὀκέλλω are collateral: so δύρομαι and ὀδύρομαι. Cf. 740 n.]

1058. 'Setting myself on my hands with the movement of a fourfooted mountain beast'. He is moving on all fours. [Porson would read  $\kappa al \ \kappa ar' \ l \chi \nu os$  or  $\kappa al \ l \chi \nu os$  in the sense of vestigium= 'foot'. Hermann  $\ell m=\ell m trib \ell \mu \nu \nu os$  omitting the comma at  $\kappa \ell h \sigma \omega$  so as to govern  $\beta d \sigma \nu$ .]

1060. ἐξαλλάξω—'shall I take instead' of my present course? So ἐξαμείβω.

1063. τάλαιναι—' cruel'.

1064. ποι και—515 n. ποι μυχών—Adverbs of time and place denoting a point in and of the whole govern a partitive gen. ποῦ γῆς; πηνίκα τῆς ἡμέρας; 'at what time of day?' Lat. ubi gentium? Cf. 961 n. Goodwin, § 168. φυγά πτώσσουσι = φείγουσι and so takes an aco.

1066. Polymestor invokes the sun, as king of light, to give him light and heal his eyes. Eventual—(from descalative) 'O that thou wouldst heal'. Tuplov péyyos = blindness. [Reiske conjectured  $\nu \epsilon \phi o s$  for  $\phi \epsilon \gamma \gamma o s$ . We'll reads  $\epsilon \pi a \lambda \lambda d \xi a s$  'having substituted'.]

1069. 'I perceive the stealthy step of women near'. The Greeks did not accurately distinguish between the various senses, so κτύπον δέδορκα: αlσθάνομαι is usually 'I perceive with my eyes'. 1290 n.

1070. ἐπάξας πόδα—'having rushed'. ἐπάσσω is transitive, a force given to it by the preposition. Δj. 40, καλ προς τι δυσλόγιστον ὧδ'  $\mathring{\eta}$ ξεν χέρα; 'And wherefore darted he thus his senseless hand?'

- 1071. 'Can I be glutted with their flesh and bones, making myself a banquet on the brutes, winning for myself their destruction as a compensation for my maltreatment?' dντίποινα in apposition with λωβάν: cf. Or. 8, σφάγιον έθετο ματέρα πατρώων παθέων dμοιβάν.
- 1076. βάκχαις "Aι.—'hell hounds'. Polymestor dare not go far from the tents lest his children's bodies may be mutilated.
  - διαμοιράσαι Cf. 1107 φέρειν. Alk. 230, πλέον ή πελάσσαι.
- 1077. 'Butchered, food for dogs and outcast on the cruel mountain side'.
- 1079. κάμψω—'tack'. [Formerly translated 'bend my knee', i.e. rest, but it seems better to make the metaphor of a ship begin from this word.]
- 1080. 'Gathering up my linen robe like some ship with sea-going rigging, having as my children's guard rushed upon this deadly lair'. ὅπως—of comparison, 398 n. πείσματα—usually the hawsers which bound the ship to the shore, here the rigging. κοίταν—wild beasts' lair, not the couch on which the dead children lay.
- 1085. 'How intolerable the evils which have been wreaked upon thee'. εξργασται is usually active after the time of Sophokles: but here as 1087 is spurious it must be active: cf. 264 n.
  - 1086. τάπιτίμια—sc. έστιν.
- Spáσαντι—The Greek theory of retribution was that it was as certain to follow guilt as the night to follow day, δράσαντι παθεῦν as the proverb put it. Cf. Eur. fragm. ἡ δίκη...σῖγα καὶ βραδεῖ ποδὶ | στείχουσα μάρψει τοὺς κακοὺς ὅταν τύχη. Hor. Od. 3. 2. 31, raro antecedentem scelestum | deseruit pede poena claudo.
  - 1087. Inserted from 722.
- 1090. 'O race rejoicing in steeds and inspired by Ares', i.e. warlike.
  - 1094.  $\vec{\eta}$  and  $\mu \hat{\eta}$  in iambies form a crasis with ov, cf. 1249 n.
- 1100. 'Shall I fly up to the lofty halls of heaven where Orion or Seirius darts from his eyes flaming rays of fire, or shall I in my misery rush to Hades' black ferry?' 'Ωρίων—in Greek the ι is doubtful, in Latin always long. Orion was the Nimrod of Greek mythology, a mighty hunter, and after death became a constellation which rose soon after the summer solstice. dμπτάμενος πλαπτάμενος from ἀνίπτομαι a collateral form of ἀναπτόμοια. Goodwin, p. 243 s.v. πέτομαι. Cf. ἀμβήσει 1263. Σείριος—properly 'scorching' sc. ἀστήρ. Otherwise known as the dog-star, cf. Verg. Aen. 10. 274, Sirius ardor, | ille sitim morbosque ferens mortalibus aegris | nascitur, et laevo contristat lumine caelum. ἀφίησιν belongs in sense both to 'Ωρίων and Σείριος, in grammar only to the latter. Αίδα πορθμός—the Styx.

1107. ξυγγνώστα—'it is pardonable', pl. for sing.: so ἀδύνατά ἐστιν, 'it is impossible', χαλεπά ἐστιν. Verg. Aen. 1. 667, frater ut Aeneas—iactetur—nota tibi—'it is known to thee how &c.' [The Chorus advise suicide.]

κρείσσον' ἢ φέρειν—'too heavy to bear' cf. Soph. O. T. 1293, τὸ γὰρ νόσημα μεῖζον ἢ φέρειν. ἐξαπαλλάξαι—act. for mid. 918 n. ζόης has been substituted by modern edd. for MS. ζωῆς which does not scan.

- [1109—1131. Agamemnon attracted by the uproar joins them, and asks Polymestor who has done the deed. Polymestor longs to clutch Hecuba and tear her limb from limb. Agam. advises less savage measures, saying that he will judge the matter.]
- 1109. 'For in no quiet tones hath Echo, child of the mountain rock, cried aloud through the host'. This beautiful metaphor illustrates the way in which many a Greek myth arose. Cf. Aesch. Ag. 477, κάσις | πηλοῦ ξύνουρος διψία κόνις.
- 1112. ἦσμεν—'had we not known'. This reading is derived from the Etymologicon Magnum (about A.D. 1000); the MSS. reading ἴσμεν is clearly wrong. The best Attic forms are ἤδη, ἤδησθα, ἤδει, ἦστον, ἦστην, ἦσμεν, ἦστε, ἦσαν.
- 1113.  $\pi \alpha \rho \ell \sigma \chi \epsilon \nu$ —'would have occasioned'.  $\hat{a}\nu$  is not necessary, cf. the Lat. sustulerat=sustulisset, Hor. Od. 2, 17, 28, [Many editors read  $\pi \alpha \rho \ell \sigma \chi'$   $\hat{a}\nu$ , but as Elmsley remarks Eur. would have written this  $\pi \alpha \rho \ell \sigma \chi \epsilon \nu$   $\hat{a}\nu$ .]
  - 1114. ydp-(I appeal to thee) 'for'.
  - 1116. ξα—out of the verse, as φεῦ 956.

- 1119. σοι-dat. incommodi. δστις ήν άρα-' Whoever he was', 511 n.
- 1120. 'Nay destroyed me not but worse': i.e. οὐ μόνον ἀπώλεσε. For a similar correction cf. 948, γάμος, οὐ γάμος ἀλλὰ κ.τ.λ. Liv. 39. 28, nec cum Maronitis, inquit, mihi aut cum Eumene disceptatio est, sed etiam vobiscum Romani. μειζόνως.— Many of these forms are found in Attic writers: Thucydides uses ἐνδεεστέρως, ἀσφαλεστέρως, χαλεπωτέρως, μαλακωτέρως, ὑποδεεστέρως: Sophokles, μειόνως: Euripides, εὐλαβεστέρως.
- 1122. τί φής;—'What say'st thou?' a formula of surprise. Note the ι subscript.
  - συ...συ—Emphatically repeated. A. cannot believe his ears. ετργασαι—mid. not pass. cf. 1085 n.
- 1125. είπε ποῦ έστιν—'tell me where he is', δπου is more usual.
- 1127. oòros—'ho there', heus tu. The expression could only be used by a superior to his inferior, the barbarian Polymestor being as inferior to Agamemnon as an Indian rajah to the Viceroy of India.
  - τί πάσχας;—' what ails thee?'
- 1128. 'Let me go that I may lay on her my raging hand': Agamemnon had caught hold of him. ἐφείναι = ώστε ἐφείναι. μαργάω desideratives from substantives and adjectives are formed in -άω and -ιάω; so θανατάω, 'I long to die', from θάνατος 'death': φονάω, 'I thirst for blood'.
- 1129. τὸ βάρβαρον—'thy savagery', viz. 'the non-Hellenic idea that he might take summary vengeance. Euripides throughout draws a contrast between Savagery as represented by Polym. and Hecuba, and Law as typified in the Greeks. He goes so far however as to make Agamemnon almost an Athenian dikast.
- [1132—1182. Polymestor shortly excuses his crime: if he had not slain the boy there would have been a nucleus for the Trojans and a second Trojan war with desolation for Thrace would have taken place. He then gives a detailed account of the way in which his children had been butchered and his own eyes put out.]
  - 1132. λέγοιμ' ἄν-' I will gladly speak', modified future.

- 1194. δίδωσι-historic present. τρέφειν=Ινα τρέφοιμι. Goodwin, § 265.
- 1135. ὅποπτος—'suspicious'. Verbals in -τος are usually passive; but we find in an active sense πιστός, 'relying'; μεμπτός, 'blaming'; ἄγευστος, 'not tasting'; ἄψαυστος, 'not touching'; and others.
  - 1137. προμηθία—see 795 n.
- 1139. dθροίση, ξυνοικίση—are irregular after the historic ξδεισα, but not so much so as to necessitate the optative being substituted. Cf. 27 n.
- 1140. 'That one of the house of Priam was alive'. 'That one of the house of Priam was alive'. 'That one of the house of Priam was alive'.
- 1141. ata—for  $\gamma ata$  to suit the metre, only found in Homer and tragedians.
- 1142. ἐπατα—'in the next place'. τάδε—'yon', pointing at them.
- 1148. Cf. Thuc. 1. 11. (The Greeks at Troy) 'on their arrival conquered the Trojans in battle,—this is clear, for else they would not have been able to build the rampart for their camp,—and evidently not even here did they employ all their forces, but turned their attention to farming the Chersonese and to freebooting'.
- 1143. γείτονες Τρώων, 'neighbours of the Trojans'. [This is better than translating Τρώων Trojanorum causa.]
- 'And that evil might befall us from which we were lately suffering'.
- 1146. *s-with the future participle gives the avowed reason, 511 n.; 'pretending to be about to tell me'.
- 1148. μόνον—not inconsistent with σὺν τέκνοις, but apart from the rest of the camp and therefore where no aid could reach him. Med, 513, ξὺν τέκνοις μόνη μόνοις.
  - 1149. elbely-optative after historic present.
  - 1150. κάμψας γόνυ—i.e. resting.
- 1151. χειρὸς ἐξ ἀριστερᾶς—'on my left hand'. [χείρει of all the MSS. is an evident mistake; the correction is due to Milton.]
- 1152.  $\omega_s \delta \eta$ —'as if for sooth'.  $\delta \dot{\eta}, \delta \hat{\eta} \tau a$  often,  $\delta \hat{\eta} \theta \epsilon \nu$  always is sarcastic.

- 1153. [8áκους έχουσαι—This is Hermann's emendation for 'θάκουν and is preferable on two grounds. (1) The augment is not as a rule omitted in Attic Greek, nor can the  $\epsilon$  be prodelided after the diphthong of  $\kappa \delta \rho a \iota$ . (2) The sense is considerably improved.] κερκίδα, cause for effect, lit. the shuttle, here the garment spun. 'Ηδωνής χερδς—' of Edonian make'. The Edonians were a Thracian people, and Edonian means little more than Thracian.  $\dot{\nu} a \dot{\nu} \gamma \dot{a} \dot{\nu} \gamma \dot{d} s$ —'bringing them under the rays of the light', hence the acc. Goodwin, p. 181.
- 1155. κάμακα—'spear', part for the whole, properly only the shaft. Θρηκίαν—gives the reason why the women wished to see it.
- 1156. γυμνόν μ' ἔθηκαν—'they stripped me of'. γυμνός, with other words signifying separation [e.g. κενός, ἔρημος,] govern the gen. Goodwin, § 174.
- διπτύχου στολίσματος—'my twofold equipment', i.e. probably, as Weil with one Scholiast suggests, the two spears which heroes carried [not the spear and cloak, for τούσδε πέπλους seems to show that he still had his garments, nor would these be much protection.]
- 1158. 'Kept dandling them in their hands, that they might be far from their father exchanging them with successions of hands', i.e. passing them from hand to hand. [χερών is doubtful, the two best MSS. having διά χερός (which is unmetrical) written over an erasure.  $\chi \epsilon \rho \hat{\omega} \nu$  is very awkward after  $\chi \epsilon \rho \hat{\omega} \nu$  in 1158.]
- 1159. γένοιντο has more MS. authority than γένοιτο. Neuters plural usually take a singular verb, but exceptions occur. See 839 n. The verse is deficient in caesura.
- 1160. κἦτα=καὶ εἶτα. In a crasis an ι is subscript only when the second word contains an ι: thus κάς for καὶ ἐς. ἐκ— 'following'. πῶς δοκεῖς;—'Can you believe it?' often inserted thus parenthetically. Hipp. 446, τοῦτον λαβοῦσα, πῶς δοκεῖς, καθύβρισεν.
- 1161. λαβοῦσαι—supply al μέν to correspond with al δέ, 1162.
- 1162. 'While others like enemies clutched and held my hands and limbs'. ['Like enemies' is, it must be confessed, very feeble, πολεμίων being a word of wide but not intense meaning, and is much weaker than e.g. έχθρός, cf. Xen. Anab.

- 1. 3. 12 ὁ δ' ἀνηρ...χαλεπώτατος δ' ἐχθρὸς ῷ ἀν πολέμιος ἢ. A man may be at war with another because their countries are at war and yet have no feeling of personal hate against him. The emendation of Mr A. W. Verrall πολυπόδων is worth considering, being much more graphic, and the change is slight. 'Devil fish' grow to great size and strength in the Mediterranean.'
- 1165. 'Whenever I tried to lift up my face'. ἐξανισταίην optative of repeated effort. Iph. Taur. 325, ἀλλ' εἰ φύγοι τις, ἄτεροι προσκείμενοι | ἐβαλλον αὐτούς.
  - 1166. κόμης—'by the hair', partitive genitive.
- 1167. πλήθα—'by reason of the crowd', or as our idiom is 'for the crowd', causal dative,
- 1168. πῆμα πήματος πλέον—'Woe greater than woe', i.e. the intensity of the evil demands some stronger name.
- 1170. πόρπας—' buckle-pins', the instrument with which Oedipus put out his eyes, Phoen. 62, χρυσηλάτοις πόρπαισω αιμάξας κόρας, connected with πείρω, pierce.
- 1172. ἐκπηδήσας—'having bounded forth'. Tmesis is not rare in tragedy, especially in the choruses, and in almost all cases a monosyllabic word stands between the component parts. Very rarely the preposition follows as at 504, 'Αγαμέμνονος πέμψαντος, ὧ γύναι, μέτα.
- 1173. κύνας—The metaphor is of some great wild beast which turns the tables on the dogs.
- 1175. τοιάδε πέπονθα—'thus have I suffered'. The cognate accusative is often represented by a neuter adj. or pronoun: the full phrase would be τοιάδε (παθήματα) πέπονθα.
- 1178. των πριν—'of the ancients'. εζρηκεν κακώς—'has spoken ill of'. εδ (κακώς) λέγω (εζρηκα) takes an acc. like εδ δράν τινά.
- 1179. λέγων ἐστὶν—an idiomatic form of λέγει, cf. ἢν ἀνέχων, 122. [Porson, after Stobaeus, amends ἢ νῶν λέγει τις ἢ πάλιν, which is neat; but the change does not seem needed.]
- 1180. συντεμών—'in brief', 'to be concise' = συντόμως  $\epsilon l\pi$ ών.
- 1182. 'He who at any time comes into contact with them knows this well'. del—with the article and participle, loses its signification 'always' and is usually placed between the two.

but Aesch. Prom. 973, θῶπτε τὸν κρατοῦντ' ἀεί. Cioero (in Verr. 5. 12. 29) borrows the idiom, omnes Siciliae semper praetores. ἐπίσταται—'knows well', Plato opposes ἐπιστήμη, exact knowledge, to δόξα. [Strangely enough no writer has more biter sayings against women than Euripides and yet few have drawn finer characters than Polyxena, Iphigeneia and Alkestis: 'the poet, who was openly reviled in his own day as the hater of women and traducer of their sex, has come down to us as their noblest and most prominent advocate in all Greek literature'.]

1183, τοις σ. κακοις—'by reason of thy woes', causal dative.

1184.  $\mu\ell\mu\eta$ —subj.  $\mu\dot{\eta}$   $\mu\ell\mu\phi\eta$  the reading of some MSS. is bad Greek.

1185, 6. Probably spurious. As the verses stand ἐπίφθονοι must='unjustly hated' which seems impossible. Hermann's correction ἀντάριθμοι for εἰς ἀριθμόν through a gloss ἰσάριθμοι is elever: Hartung substitutes πολλών for πολλαί: Porson reads πολλαί γὰρ οὐδὲν εἰσ': Reiske τῶν καλῶν. But the verses appear to be past mending, being the insertion of a copyist who wished to qualify and expand 1183, 4.

[1187—1237. Hecuba (to Agam.) 'Let no specious pleading make the worse appear the better cause': (turning fiercely to Polymestor) 'I will expose thy subterfuges, thy greed slew my boy. Why didst thou not, while Troy yet stood, kill him or send him a prisoner to the Greek camp? Again, thou shouldest have given the gold to the Greeks when they needed it, but that thou still holdest. If thou hadst safely guarded my son thou wouldst have gained fair repute and have found in him a treasure to supply thy lack of money; now, thou hast lost all!' (To Agam.) 'Thou wilt be villain if thou shalt help him'.]

1189. ἔδρασε—sc. ὁ ἄνθρωπος understood from ἀνθρώποις. For the sing. cf. Androm. 421, οίκτρὰ γὰρ τὰ δυστυχῆ | βροτοῖς ἄπασι κῶν θυραῖος ὧν κυρῆ.

1190. σαθρούς-'unsound'.

1191. τάδικα — 'injustice', subject of δύνασθαι [or 'to make a good defence of injustice', 1178 n. In either case, the sophistic and rhetorical plan of making the worse appear the better reason is alluded to.]

1192. ταδε—i.e. τὸ εὖ λέγειν τάδικα. ἀκριβόω—'learn accurately', 'reduce to a system', with a disparaging sense of subtle refinement.

- 1193. Sovery dy—more idiomatic than the variant δύναν-τα: they find out at last that they have not been so clever as they thought.
- 1194. ἀπώλοντο—'are wont to perish'. See 598 n. Goodwin, § 205. 2.
- 1195. 'And so stands thy relation to me by way of prelude, now I will turn to him and will answer him with my words,—thou who sayest that in removing a double toil from the Achaeans thou didst slay my son.' διπλοῦν πόνον—i.e. a second siege of Troy. ἀπαλλάσσων—the present often gives the aim or effort of an action, and so Nauck's ἀπαλλάζων is not needed. δε φῆς—for the abrupt change of person cf. Xen. Anab. 1. 3. 20, κῶν μὲν ἢ ἐκεῖ, τὴν δίκην ἔφη χρήζειν ἐπιθεῦναι αὐτῷ, ἡν δὲ φείγη, ἡμεῖς ἐκεῖ πρὸς ταῦτα βουλευσόμεθα. 'Ἀχαιών—cf. 1141 sq.
- 1198. ἔκῶτι—a Doric form; others used in tragedy are λθάνα, δαρός, κυναγός, ποδαγός, λοχαγός, ξεναγός, όπαδός.
  - 1200. dv. dv-cf. notes on 359, 742.
- 1201. In bitter allusion to Polymestor's words 1175, τοιάδε σπεύδων κ.τ.λ.
- 1202. πότερα κηδεύσων—'didst thou mean to make a marriage alliance with one of them?' i.e. with a Greek family.
- 1203.  $\eta$   $\tau l\nu'$  altlav;—'or what other reason?' cf. 1264,  $\eta$   $\pi ol \omega \tau \rho b \pi \omega$ ;
- 1206. βούλοιο—the optative suggests the improbability that Polymestor will speak the truth.
  - 1207. και κέρδη τα σά—'ay, and thy gains', i.e. thy greed.
- 1208. Intervention of the state of the stat
- 1211.  $\delta \lambda$ —'I say', resumptive,  $\tau \ell$  taking up the question of 1208.
- 1212. θέσθαι χάριν—'to win thyself grace in his eyes'. The middle sense is to be noted.
- 1214. Louis MSS., the rest  $\hat{\eta}\mu\nu\nu$ . Louis description of the two best MSS., the rest  $\hat{\eta}\mu\nu\nu$ . Louis description description.
- 1215. 'And the city showed by its smoke that it was in the enemy's hand'. 'Cf. Aesch. Ag. 818, καπνῷ δ' ὁλοῦσο. νῶν έτ' εὔσημος πόλις. [The verse halts somewhat and no satisfactory correction has been made. Canter conjectured καπνός = 'cum hostium manu nihil nisi fumus vestigia urbis significaret'. Weil for  $\ddot{v}$ πο reads δαμέν 'subdued by the enemy'.]

1216. κατέκτας — from stem κτα-, a collateral form of κτείνω: ἔκτᾶν, ἔκτᾶς, ἔκτᾶ, ἔκτᾶμεν. Βο ἔβην from βαίνω, ἔπτην from πέτομα, ἔφθην from φθάνω, ἔδρᾶν from διόράσκω, ἔδνν from δύω, and others. Goodwin, § 125,

1217. φανῆs—'in order that thou mayest be seen', aorist passive. [φανεῖ, fut. mid. has less authority='how thou wilt be seen'.]

1218. είπερ ήσθα—the imperfect indicative implies that the excuse was false. Goodwin, § 220. 1. a. (2).

1219. τοῦδε—i.e. Polydorus, who has been alluded to 1216.

1223. τολμậs—'canst not bear', in animum inducis, cf. 832.

καρτερείς-- 'persistest'.

1224. και μην—'and look you', introducing a new phase of her argument, cf. 216 n. κλέος [γκλες, 'reputation', whether good or bad, from Indo-Germanic γκκυ. Cf. Lat. gloria.]

1226. Cf. Ennius, quoted by Cicero, Lael. 17. 64, amicus certus in re incerta cernitur. Shakespeare, Haml. 111. 2. 217:

'Who not needs shall never lack a friend, and who in want a hollow friend doth try, directly seasons him his enemy'.

 $\dot{a}$ γαθολ=οι  $\dot{a}$ γαθοί, by crasis, so  $\dot{a}$ νήρ= $\dot{o}$   $\dot{a}$ νήρ.

1227. 'donec eris felix multos numerabis amicos'. ,a56' ** Kagra-'in each case of itself', Lat. ultro.

1228. 6 82—Polydorus. el cománices—'if thou wast in want'. Goodwin, § 220. 1, a.

1230. ἐκεῖνον ἄνδρα-Agamemnon.

1231. παίδές τέ σοι—sc. οίχονται. [Porson places the comma, not after σοι, but after οίχεται: when we must supply πράσσουσιν ὧδε.]

1232. ૐδε—with a scornful gesture.

1234. οίς έχρην—ες. πιστόν είναι.

1236. 'We shall say that thou takest pleasure in the wicked and art thyself of like nature'. αὐτὸν gains emphasis from its prominent position.

1237. Hecuba suddenly seems to remember that she is but a captive slave, and in a manner apologises for the vehemence of her words. [It is noteworthy that Hecuba's speech 1187—1237 has exactly the same number of verses as the corresponding one of Polymestor, 1132—1182].

1238. φεῦ φεῦ—' well, well', usually but not always 'particula dolentis'.

[1240—end. Agamemnon decides against Polymestor, who turns upon Hecuba and foretells her change into a cur (the origin of  $\kappa\nu\nu\delta$ ;  $\sigma\hat{\eta}\mu\alpha$ ), the murder of Kasandra and of Agamemnon himself. Agamemnon orders him away to banishment, Hecuba is to bury her dead, the Chorus of Trojan women to repair to their several masters, time for sailing is at hand. The Chorus end up the play with a short expression of enforced submission.]

1240. ἀχθωνά—the predicate in Greek is often put in the plural where we should have expected the singular; cf. 1107 n.

1242. λαβόντα—not λαβών, because in an accusative and infinitive clause after  $al\sigma\chi\dot{\nu}\eta\nu$  φέρει.

1243. ἐμὴν χάριν—' for my sake', cf. 873 n.

1244. οὖτ' οὖν—' nor indeed', οὖν resumptive. 'Αχαιῶν—
so. χάριν.

1245. ξχης—depending grammatically on δοκείς, not on ἀποκτείναι, as it strictly should; the mood implies that she charged him with still wishing to keep the gold.

1247. ἡάδιον—' a light matter'.

1249. μη άδικεν—to be pronounced μάδικεν. φύγω—deliberative conjunctive, Goodwin, § 256.

1251. τλήθι-'put up with'.

1252. γυναικός ήσσώμενος—'worsted by a woman'. The genitive may either be due to the comparative notion in the verb, or, as seems more likely, the genitive of the agent (fairly common in poetry, e.g. Soph. Aj. 807, φωτὸς ἡπα-τημένη), a variety of the genitive of the source.

1253. Tols municouv—'to my inferiors'.

- 1254. Most MSS. give this verse to Agamemnon, but most editors follow Hermann (who says 'regem semel dixisse sententiam sat est') in assigning it to Hecuba.
- 1256. Cf. Alk. 691, χαίρεις όρων φως πατέρα δ' οὐ χαίρειν δοκεις; παιδός—'for my child'.
  - 1259. ἀλλ' οὐ τάχα-Βο. χαιρήσεις.
- 1260. δρους—'to the boundaries'; this accusative of the place whither, without a preposition, is poetical. Cf. Bacchae 5, πάρειμ Δίρκης νάματ' Ἰσμηνοῦ θ' ἔδωρ.
- 1261. µèv oùv—'nay but shall have hidden thee fallen from the mast head'; cf. immo, immo vero in the Latin dramatists, used to correct a former statement.
- 1262. 'At whose hand shall I meet with a forced leap'.  $\tau \circ \hat{v} := \tau \iota_{FOS}$ ;
  - 1264. ὑποπτέροις νώτοισι—i.e. with wings upon my back.
- 1265. The accounts of the metamorphosis and death of Hecuba are, as might be expected, very various. Kynossema (κύνος σήμα) was a promontory in the Thracian Chersonese which was supposed to gain its name from her: Ov. M. 18. 568 sq. rictuque in verba parato | latravit conata loqui. Locus extat et ex re | nomen habet. Juv. 10. 271, torva canino | latravit rictu. Ov. M. 13. 565 makes the Thracians stone her to death because of her murder of Polymestor, when she was changed into a dog. Cicero, Tusc. Disp. 3. 26, Hecubam autem putant propter animi acerbitatem quandam et rabiem fingi in canem esse conversum. Plaut. Menaechmi, 701—705.
- 1267. δ Θρηξί μάντις—'the Thracians' seer', the dative differing little in sense from a genitive, cf. Phoen. 17, & Θή-βαισιν εὐιπποις ἄναξ. [Herodotus 7, 111, 'the Satrae possess the oracle of Dionysus; this oracle is on the highest mountains; the Bēssi are those Satrae who give forth the oracles of the shrine, and it is a priestess who delivers them as at Delphi, and (this oracle) is no more intricate'.]
- 1268. ἔχρησεν—of the god, ἐχρήσατο would mean 'consulted the oracle'.
  - 1269. 'No, for if he had' &c., sc. el έχρησεν.
- 1270. 'Shall I die where I fall or survive and live my life out there?' (ἐκ- intensive). [Musgrave says of ἐκπλήσω βίον, 'hoc cum θανοῦσα coniunctum ridiculi aliquid habet; cum ζῶσα tautologici'. So he conjectures πότμον, Brunck μόρον, while Weil would change ἐκπλήσω into ἐκστήσω, i. e. μεταβαλῶ βίον εἰς τάδε.]

1272.  $\vec{\eta}$   $\tau \ell$  comes in parenthetically between the substantive and the article and pronoun qualifying it, and is equivalent to  $\vec{\eta}$   $\tau \ell$   $\delta \lambda \lambda o$ ; cf. 1203 n.

1273, κυνδε σήμα—cf. 1265 note.

1275. καλ...δί—'yes and', the word between being emphatic.

1276. datarvoq-cf. 382 n.

1278. μήπω—a modest equivalent of μήποτε. Cf. Soph. El. 403, οὐ δητα' μήπω νοῦ τοσόν δ' είην κακόν. Τυνδαρὶς παίς—Klytaemnestra: the phrase is pleonastic. Cf. Goodwin, § 129. 9.

1280. обтоз—heus tu, 1127 п.

1281. The construction involves an ellipse:—'You may kill me if you like, but it will avail you nought, since &c.' The murder thus prophesied is told in the Agamemnon of Aeschylus. Strictly speaking, Mykenae was the royal city of Agamemnon, but in the time of Euripides the neighbouring town of Argos had put it into the shade.

άμμένει... ' awaits ' = ἀναμένει.

1282. ovy there—'drag him forth'. ov with the future interrogative is a strong command, Soph. Phil. 975, ove $\epsilon i$ begone'.

1284. «Υρηται... 'I have said my say', for the force of the tense cf. 236 n. »ήσων ἐρήμων depends upon ποι, cf. 455; Goodwin, §§ 168, 182. 2. For the penalty, cf. Od. 3. 270 (Aegisthus), δη τότε τὸν μὲν ἀοιδὸν ἄτων ἐς νησον ἐρήμην | κάλλατεν οἰωνοῖσιν ἔλωρ καὶ κύρμα γενέσθαι.

1286. καλ λίαν=vel maxime, και intensive, cf. και μάλα, και πολύ.

1287. δυπτύχους—' two'. So Lucr. duplices oculos.

1290. πομπίμους—'to convey us', active. δρώ—The Greeks did not accurately distinguish between the various senses, cf. with δρώ πνοάς, Aesch. Septem, κτύπον δέδορκα. Cf. 1069 n.

1294. τῶν δεσποσύνων μόχθων—the evils of servitude: of. Aesch. Persae 587, οὐκέτι δεσμοφοροῦσιν δεσποσύνοισω ἀνάγκοια.

METRICAL NOTES.

- 59-99. Anapaestic: the difficulties are in the following lines:—
- 62.  $\lambda d\beta \epsilon \tau \epsilon \quad \phi \epsilon \rho \mid \epsilon \tau \epsilon \quad \pi \epsilon \mu \pi \mid \epsilon \tau' \quad d\epsilon \ell \rho \mid \epsilon \tau \epsilon \quad \mu o v.$  The four short syllables in the first foot are counted as equivalent to an anapaest,  $\sim \sim -$ , and are justified by the rapid and excited tone which Hecuba assumes. The  $\delta \epsilon \mu a s$  of Porson is not necessary.
- 69. τί ποτ' αἴρομαι ἔννυχος οὖτω. A paroemiac, unless we insert ἄρ' before αἴρομαι, when we have a full but rather ugly anapaestic dim.: Hartung, contrary to all authority, suggests ἐννυχίοις.
- 76.  $\phi \circ \beta \in \rho d\nu \mid \delta \psi \iota \nu \mid \xi \mu \mid \alpha \theta \circ \nu \mid \delta \delta \delta \mid \eta \nu$ . The 3rd foot like the 1st in 62.  $t \delta \circ \nu$  (i.e.  $\epsilon t \delta \circ \nu$  with augment omitted) has been suggested after  $\delta \psi \iota \nu$ .
  - 83. τι νέον, final syllable is lengthened in pause.
- 90, 91. Dactylic lines, as are 74, 75. The reading dvolετωs removes all difficulty. If dνάγκα in 90 and οlετρώs in 91 be retained, then οlετρώs may be repeated and καl τόδε μοι δείμ' read, the final syllable being elided by synapheia.
  - 100-154. Ordinary anapaestic system.
- 155-177. Anapaestic, spondees predominating: the diffi-
- 164, 5, two paroemiacs together.  $\nu\hat{\varphi}\nu$  is inserted by Musgrave after  $\delta al\mu\omega\nu$ .
  - 168, dactylic.
  - 169. dγαστὸς ἐν φάει, dim. iamb. brachycatalectic.
- 170, 171. Two paroemiacs together as in 164, 165. Herm. puts  $\pi obs$  in 170 and reads  $\gamma \eta \rho alg$ .

178-215. Anapaestic, difficulties being in

186. 11 201' draotéreis. A trochaic or dochmiac interspersed.

188.  $\tau l \tau \delta \delta' d\gamma \gamma \ell \lambda \lambda \epsilon is$ . To correspond with 186 Herm. read  $\tau l \delta' \delta \tau \delta \delta' d\gamma \gamma \epsilon \lambda \epsilon is$ .

191.  $\Pi_{\eta} \lambda \epsilon i \alpha \ \gamma \epsilon \nu r \alpha$ , anapaest. monom. hypercat. Herm. reads  $\Pi_{\eta} \lambda \epsilon i \delta \alpha$ ,  $\gamma \epsilon \nu r^{\prime}$ , the  $\alpha$  cut off by synapheia.

194. μάνυσον, μᾶτερ, anapaest. monom. hypercat.

201, anapaest. dim. brachycat.

202, anapaest. monom. hypercat. Herm. amends

* * * έχθίσταν ἀρρητάν τ' ὧρσεν δαίμων.

209, 210. Cf. 168, 169.

215. Not a paroemiac, as it should be at the end of a system. Musgrave amends ξυντυχία κρείσσον' έκυρσεν.

444—485. Glyconic, the base of which is a trochee; in Latin glyconic=trochee or spondee followed by two dactyls. Observe that the lines generally begin with a single syllable, long or short, and then break into a dactyl followed by trochees or spondees. Observe also that the concluding lines of  $\sigma\tau\rho$ .  $\alpha'$  and  $d\nu\tau u\sigma\tau\rho$ .  $\alpha'$  have 11 syllables, and that in 474 and 483 a spondee is put for a dactyl.

629-657. Dactylico-trochaic, with rather frequent spondees: 632, 641 must be scanned as antispasts, i.e. iambic followed by trochee, any equivalent foot being substituted: thus

"Αλέξανδρός || είλατί | ναν κακόν | τά Σί || μούντιδι | γά.

633-642, preponderance of short syllables, which must be contracted: as

$$\dot{\epsilon} | \widehat{\tau a \mu \epsilon \theta}$$
  $\ddot{a} | \widehat{\lambda \iota o \nu} \dot{\epsilon} \pi$   $| \kappa.\tau.\lambda$ .

684 sqq. In the irregular lyric utterances of Hec. we find the general dochmiac character (of which according to Herm. there are 48 varieties). The simplest form is _____. Iamb. dims. and trims. are interspersed; but we are not to expect a correspondence of str. and antistr.

906-952, dactylico-trochaic.

1025—1034, dochmiac, the long syllables being sometimes resolved. 1030 is pure dochmiac. In 1033  $l\dot{\omega}$  is to be counted as one syllable; with the ordinary reading  $At\delta a\nu$ , the -av would have to be shortened.

1056—1084. The metre here is very irregular: there is a preponderance of anapaests and dochmiacs. Thus 1056, anap. dim., reading due to Herm.

1057, anap. paroemiac.

1058, dim. dochm.

1059, dim. dochm. with resolved syllables; observe quantity in motar.

1060, 1, anapaest. dim.

1062, dochm. preceded by a resolved cretic (-~-) Ιλιάδας.

1063, dochm. dim.

1064, anap. dim.

1081, dochmiac.

1082, anapaest. dim.

1083, iamb. dim. brachycat.

1084, iamb. dim. brachycat.

1088-1105, dochmiae, cretie, iambic and trochaic.

1088, 9, doch. monom.

1090, doch. dim.

1091, troch. dim. là one syllable. Cf. 1099.

"Among the best of the various series of school-books which are just now being published may be mentioned the 'Elementary Classics.' The notes are precisely the sort of notes which are required, which assist a boy without making him lasy."—Westminster Review.
